The English in Egypt
Wall St. Is Happier
Two Men and a Parrot
Free, To Do What?

The British express horror and surprise that thousands of educated young Egyptian students should be included in a mob in Cairo throwing stones, breaking British windows and demanding Egyptian independence, free of English control.

Those young men, who would not run away until birdshot was fired at them, know that Egypt, under British control, has had the nearest approach to honest government that she has known since Cleopatra and long before.

In Egypt today the poorest of the fellaheen can obtain justice from the richest Egyptian before a British judge. The number of blind children has been greatly reduced. The British have discouraged the Egyptian mother's theory that it is sinful to brush disease-carrying flies from the inflamed eyelids of her baby because its great-grandmother's spirit might be residing in one of the flies.

Cheerfulness in Wall Street yesterday, stocks up one to seven dollars a share. Somebody must think conditions are better. A learned Britisher told American bankers gathered in New Orleans:

"You own unlimited money and it will soon be revolving at the rate of thirty-five times a year."

That was encouraging.

The President wrote a letter saying things were much better, the country climbing up over the top of the hill. That cheered the bankers. Nevertheless, they chose for their president a man who had attacked the administration, urging bankers not to buy bonds. "The heart knoweth his own bitterness" and the banker's heart is not an exception.

In East 45th street, New York city, two old men, Italians, were fighting depression and old age with a hand organ that knew, by heart, Italian tunes about Naples, and an intelligent parrot in a small cage fastened to the organ.

The parrot's sign read, "Your fortune, 5 cents." You paid and the parrot delivered a little envelope containing your fortune, with useful advice about a dark lady or gentleman "crossing your path."

The other sources of revenue, music and human sympathy, brought occasional small coins from windows, but the parrot was a better money maker. Civilization is more interested in its own "fortune" than in the misfortune of old age.

American taxpayers freed them from Spain, and her incompetent rule. American taxpayers paved their streets, built their public schools, established libraries, opened wide the markets of the United States to the Filipinos, tariff-free.

Now we back out and set them free.

"Free," for what? Free to have interesting fights among themselves. There is real American money in the Philippines now, something worth fighting for.

"Free" and wide open for Japan to march in and take possession. Japan is intelligent, the Philippines have gold and oil resources undeveloped, cheap labor, rich forests. The day is probably not distant when our Filipino friends will wish that we had withheld that "freedom."

Secretary Ickes has changed the PWA regulations and now they forbid purchase of German subsidized steel for government projects, so that ends that, for the time being.

It isn't so much the question of "subsidized" German steel as it is the question of German steel, and sending tax money from the United States to employ labor in Germany while we have millions idle here, including thousands of steel workers. Also, and more important, is the apparent endorsement of the Hitler kind of government involved in contributing American dollars to build up Hitler's industry.

According to sworn testimony in New York, Mussolini might get similar photographs in the United States. Witnesses swear that Sam Paden, notorious and convicted usurer, charging as much as 1040 per cent, or 20 per cent a week for his loans, said that, to collect the money, he would cut off the debtor's ears, cut off his hand at the wrist, or "have one of his boys cut a man's throat for failure to pay."

Society Probe of Beacon Hill Mystery Bared

HITLER BAN ON JEWS EASED

ELITE PROBE BEACON HILL MYSTERY

Beacon Hill society conducted its own secret inquest into the mystery death of Bobby Mythen, it became known today as formal inquest opened in Municipal Court.

The "society inquest" revealed to the Boston Evening American was directed by one of the most prominent women members of the Beacon Hill elite and the board of inquiry included several attorneys of social prominence and other social registerites.

MEETINGS IN HOME

They met several times in the homes of different members, discussing various phases of the strange case a short time after the Winthrop High school senior vanished from candle-gleaming Beacon Hill while following the carol singers last Christmas eve.

Mythen's body had not, when the first meetings were held, been recovered from the Charles river below the hill.

Miss Rose Mythen, sister of the victim, and one of the first witnesses called at the opening of today's court inquiry, instigated the "society inquest," it was learned.

She called on the society woman, expressed certain fears and asked co-operation in an investigation apart from that which Boston police were making.

The several meetings followed, called together by the society lead-

Newton Girl Fights 'False Alarm' Fine

Preferring to risk trial by a superior court jury, Miss Mabel E. McGourty, 24, of Parker street, Newton Center, declined today in Newton district court an offer to suspend a $50 fine on a charge of sounding a false alarm.

No offer was made to drop a charge of drunkenness on which she was fined $10. For that count she appealed and was held for the higher court.

MacDonald Beaten in Britain

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today gained 3-to-1 decision on his demand for a mandate on rearmament and reconstruction.

Late returns of yesterday's balloting showed the national government commanding a clear majority of the 615 seats in the next House of Commons, with the likelihood that its final lead would be at least 200.

The Labor Party more than doubled its strength and ousted the former head of the national government, Ramsay MacDonald, in Seaham, together with his son, Malcolm, the colonial secretary, who ran in Bassetlaw.

Rural constituencies, reporting late today, were swelling the number of government seats.

LABOR PARTY GAINS

Opposition Liberals suffered heavy losses as the voters chose between the national government and the Labor Party.

The vote count up to 3 p. m. showed 366 National Government members had been elected to the Commons and that the popular vote for National Government candidates was a majority of 1,400,000.

Woman Flown To Hospital

Stricken with pneumonia while on a motor trip, Mrs. Joseph A. Legasse of 38 Parsons street, Brighton, was flown more than 300 miles today from Williamsburg, Ontario, to Boston.

At Boston Airport she was transferred from the plane, piloted by John H. Shobe, commercial flyer, and taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Accompanying the sick woman to Boston were her husband, an official of a Boston refrigeration concern, and a nurse. Legasse and the nurse flew to Canada last night with Shobe; with fog and low ceiling forcing the cabin monoplane down for a time at Plattsburgh.

See'y Perkins to Go, Says Van Nuys

Indianapolis, Nov. 15 (INS)—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins will be withdrawn from the Roosevelt Cabinet soon and will be succeeded by a "man who talks the language of the laborer," Senator Frederick Van Nuys (D.) of Indiana, predicted today.

FRUGAL GOVERNMENT

". . . With all these blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens—a wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities."

—THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, March 4, 1801.

U. S. PUTS OIL, METAL ON WAR LIST

Washington, Nov. 15 (INS)—In a new formal declaration of American neutrality, Secretary of State Cordell Hull today declared that the shipments of such raw materials as oil, copper, trucks, scrap iron, steel to either Italy or Ethiopia was "directly contrary" to the neutrality policy of this government.

Hull described these products as "essential war materials," and called attention to the fact that a considerably increased amount of them was being exported to Italy for "war purposes."

WITHOUT PRECEDENT

This was the first time the government had gone so far as to designate raw materials as war supplies and to name them as among the articles which this government does not wish to see sold to belligerents.

Recalling President Roosevelt's statement that Americans who engage in any transactions with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk, and his own statement urging American business to resist the lure of war profits, Hull's statement said:

"The American people are entitled to know that there are certain commodities, such as oil, copper, trucks, tractors, scrap iron and steel scrap, which are essential war materials although not actually arms, ammunitions or implements of war, and that according to recent government trade reports a considerably increased amount of these is being exported for war purposes.

SCRAPING EXPORTS

"This class of trade is directly contrary to the policy of this government as announced in official statements of the President and Secretary of State, as it is also contrary to the general spirit of the recent neutrality act.

"The administration is closely observing the trend and volume of exports to these countries and within a few days the department of commerce experts to have complete detailed lists of all commodities exported to the belligerents, which will enable exact comparison with lists for the same period last year."

Horse Runs Away Through Traffic

Walter Galvin, 11 Aberdeen road, Somerville, driver of a bakery wagon, had an exciting time of it for a few minutes today when the harness of his horse broke at Medford and Central streets. He wound up a downhill run of a half a mile through traffic when the wagon tipped over in Gilman square, tripped up old "Dough-bhin," as bakers are wont to call their steeds, and deposited Galvin in Gilman square squarely on his back.

A crowd quickly assembled in hope of a deluge of doughnuts and fresh bakery goods. Galvin suffered a slight ankle injury.

ELY SUES U. S. TO BLOCK HOUSING

In a test of the government lowcost housing program's constitutionality, former Governor Ely, acting for South Boston property owners, filed suit today in Federal Court in Washington, seeking an injunction.

The former governor seeks to restrain Secretary Harold L. Ickes, public works administrator, from carrying out the South Boston project.

Immediately after filing the action, the United States district court ordered the government to show cause on November 25 why the injunction should not be issued.

Named as South Boston propertyholders and petitioners were Hannah M. Connors, John M. Wattendorf, Cecelia F. Wattendorf, George Y. Wattendorf, Charles A. Mann and James E. Regan.

All are owners of property adjoining the site selected for the South Boston project. They contended the proposed low cost houses and apartments would destroy their investments.

They charged, specifically, that the government's low rentals would attract tenants from privately-owned property. Such government competition, they complained, would make it impossible for their own properties to profit.

At the same time, the plaintiffs attacked as unconstitutional title 2 of the National Recovery Act and the executive orders under which the PWA is constructing the South Boston housing project.

BERLIN FIXES NEW CITIZEN AND BRIDAL LIMITS

By PIERRE HUSS
International News Service Correspondent

Berlin, Nov. 15—A sensational about-face on the part of Chancellor Adolf Hitler on the Jewish question surprised Germany today.

Hitler ended a bitter battle, which has been waged behind the scenes of the Nazi drama since the Nuremberg party conclave, by a compromise which decrees, in part, that persons of partial or even half Jewish heritage may be citizens.

Another part of the compromise designed to satisfy both conservative forces in his government and Nazi extremists allows that Nazis to enforce their idea of "100 per cent Aryanism" as a qualification for party membership.

BIG NAMES INVOLVED

And many of the biggest names in the army, in the titled aristocracy, as well as among the titans of commerce and industry will now remain on the rolls of German citizenry.

The compromise was revealed in the regulations of enforcement of the Nuremberg Law published today.

It revoked the extreme Nazi demand that only Aryans "proving racial purity" back to 1800 should be regarded as German citizens.

The law especially stipulates that no organization except the Nazi party can impose higher standards

N. Y. MAYOR RULES BRIDGE 'UNSAFE IF UNTESTED'

New York, Nov. 15 (US)—With Mayor LaGuardia stating bluntly that he wants on German steel used in this city, Triborough Bridge officials disclosed today that every effort is being made to cancel the Nazi steel ordered for that project.

Moves for cancellation came after Secretary of the Interior Ickes, in Washington yesterday, yielded to the nation-wide protest against the purchase of foreign goods with money appropriated for relief of American jobless.

He announced no German steel or other foreign materials furnished under governmental subsidies would be bought with PWA funds.

Ickes, who made known his decision in a letter to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, indicated he planned to do nothing about the contracts already let for German steel in the Triborough Bridge project and the Morehead City, N. C., ocean terminal.

Mayor LaGuardia hinted that, if its use were persisted in, he might have to declare the bridge unsafe for use, as he could not be certain of the safety of Nazi-made steel unless thoroughly tested.

Nathan Burkan, chairman of the bridge authority, still insists the contract is legal, but expressed hope the Wooderest Construction Co., sub-contractors, would be able to void it.

George V. McLaughlin and Robert Moses, other members of the bridge authority, also said the contract had been made in full conformity with PWA rules, but added:

"It has not yet been determined whether or not the contractor in this case will be able to obtain American sheet piling. He has for several days been making an effort to do so, and it is quite possible he will find an American product which will meet the requirements with the use of additional bracing."

INJUNCTION SEEN

Should this move fail, an injunction suit to block the deal will probably be brought by the nonsectarian anti-Nazi league under the "anti-dumping" laws, it was disclosed.

Flagrant violations of the American tariff laws have been going on since the Hitler regime came into power, he declared, "with the silent encouragement of our authorities," he added.

"Refusal of the federal authorities to recognize the blighting effect of this constant dumping upon our own labor has led directly to the present incongruous state where it is proposed to use PWA funds to purchase German steel at less than for what it can be manufactured in Germany, the loss being made good by the German government at the expense of our labor.

"The remedy is plain. The goods should be excluded by the customs authorities. The responsibility rests with the government."

LABOR PROTESTING

Labor leaders continued to protest against the use of German steel on a relief project. Edward J. Smith, president of Local 40, International Association of Structural Ironworkers, wrote to President Roosevelt urging him to stop foreign-made steel from being used in the Triborough Bridge or any other project. He said:

"Inasmuch as the money for this project was appropriated for the purpose of relief to American labor, it appears unpatriotic and certainly unjust to permit this money to be sent to foreign shores where it may be used for the relief of foreign labor."

Lynching Balked, Negro in Prison

Moultrie, Ga., Nov. 15 (AP)—John Henry Sloan, negro slayer of a white youth, was taken to the state penitentiary in Milledgeville, Ga., today, under protection of state troopers who frustrated an attempt by an angry crowd to lynch him.

The People's Mandate—'BUY AMERICAN'

Nazi Steel Thrives; Exports Up

Berlin, Nov. 15 (US) — While American steel works have been operating far below capacity, German steel mills were tripling their exports to the United States in the last six months, it was learned today.

In 1934, the total German steel exports to the United States amounted to 9,829 tons, worth 1,049,000 marks, all in structural iron and steel. At current exchange rates the mark is worth about 40 cents.

In the first six months of 1935, Germany exported to the United States more structural iron and steel than during the whole previous year, namely 10,500 tons, valued at 1,042,000 marks.

Moreover, while Germany did not sell any steel tubes or steel plates and wire to the United States last year, this year there have been considerable exports of these steel products.

During the first six months of 1935, Germany exported to the United States 5000 tons of stele tubes, valued at 1,494,000 marks, and 358 tons of plate and wire, valued at 472,000 marks.

Traffic Tied Up

Ickes Explains New Nazi Ban

Washington, Dec. 15 (US)—Secretary Ickes letter to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, disclosing his intention to change PWA regulations and forbid purchases of foreign materials produced under subsidies, follows:

"Acknowledgment is made of your letter of November 12 raising the question of the effects on American labor of the use of foreign steel under contracts let by the Triborough bridge authority of New York city which received an allotment by way of loan and grant of $44,200,000 from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

"In addition to this project there is one other where some what similar circumstances exist —in Morehead City, North Carolina. In both instances, contracts for foreign steel were given by the contractor or subcontractor.

"First of all, let me tell you in no uncertain terms that it is not the intention, nor has it ever been the intention, of PWA to permit the use of money voted by Congress for relief purposes to be used for the purchase of foreign materials on project construction.

CITES LEGAL DOUBT

"Many months ago this subject came up. There was definite legal doubt as to the authority of the executive branch of the government to forbid the use of foreign materials in the absence of direct legislative sanction. During the discussion of the original NRA Bill in the Senate, an amendment forbidding the use of foreign materials was offered but was not accepted.

"Therefore, we established a 'differential' of 15 per cent on purchases of materials in excess of $10,000 under the new program. That is, as you will understand, in addition to the protection given by the tariff laws. We thought it would be impossible for sellers of foreign materials to compete under this program successfully with domestic suppliers. So far as I know, out of the tens of thousands of contracts which have been let for the purchase of materials, not only by PWA, but by other departments of the government under the relief appropriations, the cases I mentioned are the only two instances where the rule has proved ineffective. The amount involved in these two projects is comparatively small.

CHANGING REGULATIONS

"Such a situation was, of course, neither anticipated nor could it reasonably have been foreseen.

"Accordingly, PWA is changing its regulations so as to provide that no foreign materials may be purchased for federal or non-federal projects unless approval is first obtained from the administrator of public works, instead of allowing purchases to be made directly by contractors or sub-contractors.

"I intend, if any bids lower than American are received from foreign producers, to determine two important questions before making any decision.

"The first question that will have to be answered is: 'Is the foreign bid lower than the American bid either because of foreign government subsidy or by foreign exchange regulations which must be considered unfair to the American producer?' Full investigation will be made in such case by the proper governmental authorities.

ARE BIDS COLLUSIVE?

"Second: If the foreign bid is lower than the American bid, we shall ask this question: Are the American bid or bids collusive, or are the American bid or bids so unreasonably high as to justify the belief that advantage is being taken of the government in administering its relief funds?

"In one of the cases referred to above, four bids received from American manufacturers were identical, and this fact alone constitutes at least some evidence of collusion. In both cases the American bids were so far above the German bids as to justify inquiry into their fairness.

"Steps are being taken to have both of these questions investigated and reported on by the federal trade commission. I shall be glad to advise you as to their findings."

CHURCH UNION IDEA HIT

Criticism of the action of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in terminating his annual gifts to the Northern Baptist Church was expressed in Boston today.

The Rev. Otis W. Foye, pastor of the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church and past president of the Northern Baptist Education Society, rebuked the action as against the best interests of church and inter-church co-operation.

"This action by Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., came as no surprise to me," he declared. "But while I am heartily in favor of inter-denominationalism, it cannot be achieved by working in thin air.

"The individual person should support his own church, and the churches, as a unit, co-operate with each other.

Urges One Faith

"I do not believe that this action of Mr. Rockefeller is the best way to secure his wished-for aim."

Rockefeller, in announcing by letter to the northern Baptist convention last March that he would contribute no more to the general Baptist budget, made it plain that he considers many denominations in the Protestant faith "an obstacle to the development of the spirit and life of Christ among men."

Rockefeller long has been an ardent supporter of the Baptist Church, in which he was reared. His letter, dated March 7, 1935, but not made public until today said:

"My faith is increasingly centered on the few fundamental principles of Christ's life and teaching as set forth in the four gospels. I believe then, principles can be applied with practical vision and spiritual power."

Needs of Youth

Rockefeller said he did not believe young people are greatly concerned about denominational distinctions that "are bound to fade in a forward movement of a great united church open to all who seek to follow Christ and find in him the abundant life. Such a church will, I believe, meet the needs of the young people and enlist their support of its missions at home and abroad."

While Rockefeller said he would no longer contribute to the budget of the Baptist Church, he said that he would be glad to give money to any specific undertakings of the church which sought to help Christians of whatever creed.

Bequests of $15,000 each to the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital were made in the will of Marion Grace Pratt of Middleboro, filed today at Plymouth County Probate Court.

In addition, a quarter of a $240,000 bequest to her nephew, Edmund Pratt, will go to the Massachusetts General upon his death and another quarter to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

A bequest of $25,000 to the American Unitarian Association stipulated it be used for religious work in Marlboro. St. Luke's Hospital there received $150,000.

POOSHIN' TONY CLASSY

He's With '400's' Forgotten Men

By WIN BROOKS

He was a little man with a big black moustachio, the ends of which, twisted like a Pittsburgh stogie, rested on the handles of the poosh-cart he was pooshing.

Piled on the cart were bright green peppers, bright yellow lemons and malaga grapes and piled up behind the cart were five blocks of creeping cars, blaring indignant protest at the delay.

The little man was oblivious to it all as he pooshed; some benign satisfaction inwardly appreciated but apparent to the onlooker, brightened his countenance so it shone like one of his peppers.

He heard not, neither did he see: he pooshed in rapture.

In That Crowd

The little man stopped pooshing the cart and all the cars behind came to a standstill, making raucous noises.

"Who in the blankety blank blank are you to hold up Summer street traffic?" demanded the purpling officer.

"Ha!" said the little man. "Ha! You not know me, yes?"

He reached a hand under the pepper pile, and he withdrew a little book.

"Ha!" again, explosively. "You not know me, yes?" He held the little book before the puzzled patrolman.

It was the Boston Social Register for 1936.

"I show you. Look! Mister Jeremie Roosevelt, he is not in here. Mister John Coolidge, he is not in here. Mister John Lodge, you do not find heem. Yes?

GABLE and Wife PART

STILL FRIENDS, ACTOR SAYS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Hollywood, Nov. 15 — The long and oft-rumored Clark Gable separation was today admitted by both the screen star and Mrs. Gable.

When I queried Clark, who is spending the remainder of his vacation in New York after a trip to Mexico and South America, on the truth of the rumor, he said briefly over the long distance telephone:

"Yes, it's true. But I would rather have any statement come from Rhea. Whatever she says is all right with me."

Became Difficult

I asked Clark if it were true that a financial arrangement had been made before he left Hollywood. He admitted he and Mrs. Gable had arranged a property settlement and that when he returns to Hollywood he will go directly to a hotel instead of to the Gable home in Brentwood. He said:

"But I would rather you talked with Rhea. She is a fine woman and whatever fault there is, blame it on me. We are still perfectly good friends and I know that I can always count on her friendship."

Mrs. Gable said:

"I am sorry the story has come out. I don't know what I can say, except that Clark worked very hard and very steadily before he went away.

"Perhaps because he was so tired he became a little difficult and that was the reason misunderstandings arose. We have no immediate plans for a divorce. There is, as you know, no other man or woman."

A Great Find

The Gables were married June 10, 1931. Mrs. Gable, who was Mrs. Rhea Lucas, a wealthy and attractive widow from Texas, met handsome Clark in New York. They came to Hollywood to see what could be done in the movies.

The story has often been told about his appearance on the stage in "The Last Mile" in Los Angeles, when Lionel Barrymore saw him and announced to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that Gable was a great find.

The success of Clark Gable has been phenomenal. Ever since he won the academy prize for 1934 in "It Happened One Night," with Claudette Colbert, for the best performance of any actor of the year, he has become increasingly popular.

Everywhere he goes he is mobbed by women, demanding his smiles and his autographs. Clark has remained singularly affable although harassed by his lack of privacy.

JAMES PALARMO

Jimmy Palarmo, 8, the obedient lad who followed his father's instructions to the point that he disappeared from City Hospital yesterday after doctors had said he required an appendectomy, was still at home today. In fact, he thought he might go to school.

"Sure, it kinda hurts but my father said to come home," he told reporters who found him at home, 881 Harrison avenue, even though he was supposed to stay in hospital over night.

Over the 'phone today the father, Philip Palarmo gruffly told an inquirer:

GABLE IN SOCIETY

Star Gay in N. Y. as Love Crashes

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—Announcement of the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Gable today brought to light the fact that filmland's No. 1 lover has gone in for society with a capital "S" and a broad "a."

For, when Mrs. Gable's admission of a parting of the ways shot her glamorous husband's name into the headlines, where did the reporters find him? They found him being chevied about by the Smart Set.

"The grand passion of three continents" was in seclusion in a fashionable Long Island home today, keeping out of the public gaze and resting from a round of the gay spots along Broadway in the company of a group whose names decorate society columns.

Gable, bronzed to the shade of a Florida millionaire from his recent trip to South America, squired an extremely pretty, mink-coated young lady by the name of Miss Mary Taylor. Miss Taylor was described on the society pages in 1932 as the prettiest debutante of that season.

Jay O'Brien and his wife, who was the former wife of Julius Fleischmann; Marshall Hemingway and his wife, the former Mrs. Putnam Humphries; Miss Olive McClure, Bertrand Taylor and Gable's old friend Richard Barthelmess.

ROGERS Doubts New POST

PROPOSED FOR SMITH'S JOB

Robert E. Rogers, Technology professor and Boston Evening American columnist, today declared it extremely unlikely that Governor Curley is to appoint him as State commissioner of education.

Reports were current that Professor Rogers would be appointed to succeed Payson Smith, whose term expires December 1.

Previously, it is understood, Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of the Boston schools, had been under consideration.

He was reported to have declined, however.

Concerning the report Professor Rogers said today:

"I have received no intimation from the Governor that I was being considered for the post. I have received no offer. I do not expect to receive one. For many reasons it would be impossible for me to accept such an offer. I have no desire for a political situation.

"I believe that Superintendent Campbell would make an admirable commissioner of education. Since, apparently, he has declined the position, I can only associate myself most heartily with his statement that Commissioner Payson Smith should be reappointed for another term. As a member of the Corporation of Technology he has been on the visiting committee of my department for many years and I have grown to know him well. His retirement at this time would be a serious loss to Massachusetts education."

Recognition for western Massachusetts in the appointment is being urged on Governor Curley, it was learned today.

A campaign is on for James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams. He was formerly superintendent of Bridgewater schools, is 35, and the father of four children.

Morro Lifeboats Under Scrutiny

New York, Nov. 15 (AP) — The federal government turned its attention today to the condition of the lifeboats on the burned liner Morro Castle, seeking the cause for the loss of 124 lives in the disaster off Asbury Park, N. J., over a year ago.

Thomas S. Torresson, marine superintendent of the New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Company, was led through a cross-examination in ful technical detail of the life boat's equipment.

A passing motorist, Manuel Silva, of Hudson, took Langevin to the hospital where his name was placed on the danger list. He is suffering from a compound fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain and contusions and lacerations.

Theory and Practice

For 18 months the State Department, under Secretary Hull, has been negotiating so-called reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations.

Real progress has been retarded because of Mr. Hull's insistence that concessions made by the United States in tariff rates to one country in return for mutual concessions should be generalized to ALL friendly nations.

THE League of Nations review of world trade for 1934 reveals that the largest strides in world trade have been made by the nations making such agreements, of which 380 are now on record.

Apparently the bulk of these gains have been made AT THE EXPENSE OF THE UNITED STATES.

America's share of total international trade fell from 13.84 PER CENT in 1929 to 9.53 PER CENT in 1934.

Secretary Hull's visionary theories prevent us from making similar trade pacts for the benefit of American industry and agriculture.

ITALIANS CLAIM CAPTURE OF KEY CITY, HARAR, NEARS

Rome, Nov. 15 (AP)—The fall of the strategic Ethiopian city of Herar was reported by Italian correspondents on the East African front today to be imminent.

Harar, the second largest city in Ethiopia—Addis Ababa being larger—is just south of the important railroad connecting Addis Ababa and Djibouti, French Somaliland. Italian forces in both north and south are reported heading for this railroad.

After a pitched battle in the Fafan river area, announced yesterday, Colonel Maletti's column in south Ethiopia was engaged in sweeping the region clear of ambuscades and raiders.

The correspondents said Maletti with his "Flying Dubats," was already so far advanced in the high valley of the Fafan that he was "only 40 kilometers (about 28 miles) from his immediate objective."

72 KILLED IN BATTLE

This movement may occupy several days, it was said, giving time for reinforcements to come up.

They reported that the regular Ethiopian defenders of the territory around Harar had fallen back in disorder before Maletti's advance.

They said prisoners told Maletti that the soldiers he was driving back were the "flower" of Emperor Haile Selassie's army. They were said to be concentrating at Jijiga.

Ethiopian losses of 55 dead and 100 wounded and Italian casualties totalling 20 killed and 54 wounded in a skirmish at Azbi were reported by an official Italian communique today.

The Azbi fight, reported as a victory for Colonel Mariotti's detachment of Danakil troops, lasted throughout yesterday and ended with the Ethiopians' withdrawal.

OFFICIAL REPORT

An official communique announced that General Emilio De Bona, commander of the Italian northern army, reported:

"Danakil column in connection with detachments of the First Army Corps encountered on the edge of the plateau near Azbi armed forces of Degiac Kassa Sebat. After lively fighting the enemy was defeated and left the field of battle with 55 dead and some 100 wounded.

"On our side four officers were wounded and 20 Askaris were killed and 50 wounded. Azbi occupied."

The Addis Ababa government reported in an official communique that another air raid on the southern front brought half a hundred bombs down on Daggan Bur, which lies mid-way between Gerrahel and the vital points of Jijiga and Harar.

One priest died under the assault, the Ethiopian government communique said, and a church was leveled by fire.

This attack on the town 100 miles southest of Jijiga followed reports that the site had already been occupied by Italian advance guards—and a denial of these reports by Ethiopia.

Northern Army Bombs Town South of Makale

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Makale, Ethiopia, 2 p.m., Nov. 14—The Ethiopian line of retreat south to Amba Alaji was bombed heavily today by Italian military planes, one major enemy encampment being virtually destroyed.

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Aden, Arabia, Nov. 15—Britain is rushing more troops to Egypt in view of the Cairo riots and tension on the Libyan border.

An official order cancelled home leave of several hundred British officers and soldiers who had embarked here for England aboard the transport Nevassa yesterday.

They are to be sent to Cairo until the crisis ends.

Italy Ships 2428 More Troops to Ethiopia

Naples, Nov. 15 (AP)—The steamer Principessa Maria sailed for East Africa today with 52 officers and 1860 troops, while the Belvedere took aboard 56 officers and 1720 men for service with Italy's army in Ethiopia.

Cairo, Nov. 15 (AP)—Armed police patrols restored quiet today after the anti-British demonstrations that resulted in four deaths and injuries to 100 in their two-day course.

Despite the insistence of Egypt's powerful Wafd nationalist party for the resignation of Prime Minister Tewfik Nessim Pasha and a halt to British influence in Egyptian affairs, officials said the situation was "under control."

Britain Set On Penalties For Il Duce

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Authoritative quarters said today the government's success in the general elections would not change its plan of going ahead with sanctions against Italy, beginning next Monday.

The League, these quarters said, will remain the keystone of British foreign policy. They asserted Britain will continue to do all in its power to uphold the covenant and maintain and increase the League's efficiency.

Peace, they stated, is the first interest of the British people, and the rearmament program will be strictly confined to what is necessary to make the country secure thereby and fulfill Britain's obligation to the League.

Germany Bans Arms Export

Berlin, Nov. 15 (INS)—The German government issued a proclamation today prohibiting by law export and import of war materials without a special license from the foreign trade commissioner and war minister.

The proclamation provided severe punishment for violations. A detailed list of prohibited materials will be published tonight, modeled on arms embargo lists issued by other powers.

BALDWIN GAINS 3-1 VICTORY IN BRITAIN VOTE

returns, although some estimates were that the government might have as much as 200 more seats than the opposition. The last majority for the National Government was 412 seats.

ASTOR FAMILY WINS

Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs, was re-elected by the huge majority of 24,816. Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, squeezed back into his seat by a majority of 642 votes.

The Astor clan, headed by Lady Astor, the Virginia-born peeress, had at least three successes out of its six candidates.

Lady Astor was re-elected, her son, W. W. Astor took the East Fulham seat away from the Labor Party member, and Lord Willoughby De Eresby, Lady Astor's son-in-law, won in Rutland and Stamford.

Ramsay MacDonald Bitter in Vote Defeat

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, somewhat bitter and by his own admission a "done in old man," sat in his Hampstead home today, too weary to discuss his future plans following his defeat in the British elections.

At the same time his victorious opponent, E. Shinwell, labor candidate, issued a statement that MacDonald's defeat had brought the national government hurling to the ground.

Recovering from the combined shock of his own defeat and that of his son, Malcolm MacDonald, the former prime minister said he was not surprised by his loss and that he was glad he had made his fight for re-election in the Seaham district.

MacDonald, who is lord president of the Council, can still be retained in the Cabinet if he and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin choose to take this step.

This could be done by his elevation to a Peerage, a suggestion which has been made in some quarters, or by his being placed in the Commons by a bye-election.

The former prime minister said: "Seaham is not only in a special area where the 'means test' (by which the issuance of the dole is decided) is the predominating issue, but where the great majority of electors are miners and a wage increase was made a political issue.

"I am glad I stuck to my own constituency. I only hope my fight has been of some help to others in the area."

There were wild scenes of enthusiasm in Seaham where the miners and their wives sang "The Red Flag."

BARRYMORE SIGNS PACT WITH ELAINE

Actor John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie, his erstwhile protegee-fiancee, reached an agreement today over the large diamond ring he gave her and then claimed back as an "injun gift."

Miss Barrie signed a document attesting that she will stake no claims on Barrymore's natural reserve and that he is under no obligations to her.

Barrymore returns to her the expensive chunk of irridescent ice which she declared was token of their betrothal but which he held was merely a seal of friendship.

Under the signed document, Barrymore's interpretation of the meaning of the ring is upheld. He and Elaine are not engaged.

Announcement of the agreement was made in New York by Barrymore's attorney, Frank Aranow, and confirmed in Boston by Elaine in an interview with the Boston Evening American at her local hotel suite.

New York construed it to be the end of the romance that began in a hospital, was nourished on a yachting trip on the Caribbean and climaxed by Barrymore's cross-country escape gallop with his "Ariel" in breathless but futile pursuit.

But here, Elaine said her feeling toward Barrymore had undergone no change and that she would still regard the ring as she had always regarded it.

Both sides statfd there was no money settlement and no suggestion of the sort.

"NO MONEY PAID"

The statement, signed by Aranow, follows:

"In behalf of Mr. John Barrymore, I have arranged to return to Miss Elaine Barrie the diamond ring which she claims belongs to her. Miss Barrie has made no other claims against Mr. Barrymore, and both Miss Barrie and her mother, who is her legal guardian, have signed statements that Mr. Barrymore is under no obligation to them.

"Miss Barrie did not ask for any money, nor was any money paid to her."

Miss Barrie as a student journalist at Hunter College in New York met the actor when she asked him for an interview while he was confined to his bed in a New York hospital.

On the trip to the West Indies that followed aboard the Barrymore yacht Miss Barrie said that Barrymore bought the diamond and presented it to her as an engagement ring.

They failed to declare the ring at the customs when it was returned and the government assessed a penalty of twice the value of the ring. Barrymore paid the assessment.

Miss Barrie said today she preferred not to state at whose suggestion the agreement document was submitted for her mother's signature.

"Of course we signed," she said, "because there was never any idea that Mr. Barrymore was under any obligation to me.

"As to the romantic angle, my feeling towards Mr. Barrymore remains unchanged. I don't think Mr. Aranow (Barrymore's attorney) has anything to do with that, do you?

"Regarding Mr. Barrymore's feeling for Miss Barrie, let Mr. Barrymore speak for himself.

"The diamond ring I shall merely regard as I have always regarded it, as a symbol of affection between us."

ENDS SUIT TAIK

Miss Barrie has not yet received the ring.

"It was my property," she said, "given to me by Mr. Barrymore in Havana, and it's true it is to be returned to me soon.

"The New York statement puts an end to newspaper talk that there would be a suit and bears out what I have said all along that there would be no suit.

"There never was at any time any question of a suit and if it hadn't been a Barrymore, the case probably wouldn't have achieved any notoriety at all."

RING ONLY DISPUTE

Asked if there had been any settlement of any kind, she said:

"Absolutely not. There wasn't occasion for any.

"The only question ever in dispute was about the ring."

Miss Barrie's mother and her father, just returned from a western business trip, were with her. She was making selections from "Come Hither," a book of verse for her radio broadcasts which are incidental to her appearance in the cast of "Katy Did—So What?"

"At the present time, I am principally interested in my career," she said. "I want to be a great actress—as great an actress as John Barrymore is an actor."

SICKBED DIVORCE

Ives' Wife in Hospital Gets Decree

For the second time in the history of Middlesex Probate Court a divorce, uncontested, was granted today on a mere deposition without the plaintiff appearing personally.

Mrs. Jennie Pearl Ives, Newton, a patient in New England Hospital for Women, was awarded the decree from Walton S. Ives of Boston on charges of cruelty and neglect to provide.

Mrs. Ives, 27, was married Sept. 18, 1934, and lived with Ives for three weeks during which time he contributed nothing to her support beyond buying her a meal or two, her deposition informed Judwge John C. Leggett.

A woman named "Violet" was also named as a contributing cause of the separation.

Mrs. Ives' deposition described a visit to her husband's office in Hanover street, Boston, after he had failed to come home for several nights. There, she said, she found the lady known as "Violet," who went to the Ives home, too.

According to Attorney John W. Vaughan, counsel for Mrs. Ives, who took her deposition at the hospital, the 27year-old wife has been near death, due to a highly nervous condition and approaching child-birth.

Mrs. Grace Macy, mother of the young wife, testified that three weeks after her marriage Mrs. Ives was brought home by her brother and that today was the first time she had any hope for her daughter's recovery.

On the representation of Attorney Vaughan that the young woman's condition would be seriously set back if the decree were not awarded at once, Judge Gibbs ordered it granted and the formal certificate prepared.

BEACON HILL DEATH QUIZ OPENS

DETECTIVE CALLED

One of the detectives working on the case was called into the secret society inquest and given certain information that resulted in the questioning of this man. He convinced investigators he knew nothing material to the inquiry.

Miss Mythen was the fifth witness called at today's inquest before Judge Francis J. Good behind closed doors in a municipal court lobby.

Preceding her were State Detective Lieutenant Frank Hale and Lieutenant Inspector John A. Dorsey of Boston police, and her sorrowing parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mythen of Cottage avenue, Winthrop.

TESTIFIES 45 MINUTES

Mrs. Mythen, who received anonymous phone calls bearing upon the case before Bobby's body was found, was followed into the hearing room by her husband, who testified for 45 minutes. The victim's mother was then recalled for 20 minutes.

Special Officer William Ross, in charge of the Boston police missing persons bureau, was another witness.

The inquest, resulting from a reopened state investigation on evidence indicating possible foul play, seeks official determination of the death as murder, accident or suicide.

"We are convinced this was not a suicide," said Assistant Attorney-General Henry P. Fielding, in charge of presenting the evidence.

Fifteen witnesses were called for today and it is expected the inquest will be adjourned until Monday when four or five more will testify.

PUBLIC BARRED

All testimony was presented behind closed doors. At a conference preceding the opening, Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster decided there was no reason to depart from the usual custom in such cases and open the doors to the public.

A departure from custom, however, was the presence of a stenographer to take down all evidence. Henry Sheehan, public stenographer, was engaged.

Mythen, who is said to have been acquainted with several members of the Beacon Hill Bohemian colony, and to have "crashed" society parties on the hill while posing as Bob Haley, disbarred captain of the Harvard football team, was a blonde, good-looking, curly-haired youth, a good athlete and popular at Winthrop High.

On Christmas eve he accompanied three friends, Paul O'Leary, Jean Martell and Hyman Brookman, to the hill to follow the carol singers.

Wisconsin Leads In Beer Drinkers

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—The heaviest beer drinkers in the nation live in Wisconsin, according to a report before the national conference of state liquor administrators here today.

In a survey of per capita consumption of beer during the year ended January 3, 1935, taken by a committee on statistical data, it was discovered Wisconsinites consumed an average of 18.64 gallons of beer each.

Vermont residents drank the least beer, but were third in liquor consumption.

'Rubber' Check Charged in Deal

Parker charged he sold four cars to Hurwitz, who gave him a check for $367.50. When the check came back, Hurwitz refused to honor it, Parker alleged.

HIS DEATH SUBJECT OF INQUEST TODAY

Mysterious death of this Winthrop high school boy, 16-year-old Robert Mythen, is the subject of a formal court inquest which began today. The youth disappeared after a Christmas Eve party on Beacon Hill. His body was subsequently found in the Charles river.

CHINA MASSING 500,000 MEN

Tokio, Nov. 15 (INS)—China is massing an army of half a million soldiers in the northern area, dispatches from the continent charged today, as the Sino-Japanese crisis grew rapidly more tense.

Under flaming war-time headlines, the newspaper Hochi said there are now 200,000 troops in the vicinity of Nanking, and other forces being stationed there and at Shangri will swell the total by 200,000.

Stress was laid in the newspapers' excited account on the reportedly militant speech of Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek, former Chinese president and now head of the military forces, before the conference of the Kuomintang, the party that controls the Chinese government, at Shanghai.

Marshal Chiang is said to have bitterly assailed Japan's pressure on North China's independence.

Newspaper reports from Peiping say the chamber of commerce, bankers' association, brokers' association, and 30 other Chinese public organizations simultaneously sent messages to Generals Sun Cheh-Yuan, Shang-Chen, and Han Fu-Chu, begging them to declare the independence of North China.

DINNER FOR ONLY $150

That's for One! And Includes Mush!

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—The "perfect dinner" eaten last night by 200 self-proclaimed epicures, members of the Wine and Food Society, was revealed today to have cost $150 a plate.

Small mushroom tarts and cheese ramekins on pastry crust as hors d'oeuvres, fortified by 30-year-old sherry.

Cream of sorrel soup. Grilled pompano with mustard sauce, parsley potatoes with '29 burgandy, roast breast of baby guinea hen on toast, new green peas cooked with lettuce, creamed mushrooms, and fried caramel mush with '29 red burgundy wine.

Then green salad with highly-seasoned French dressing; American cheeses; almond souffle with liquor sauce; champagne ('23 Veuve Cliquot); black coffee and "four kinds of brandy."

All for only $150!

WELFARE FUEL SLASH HIT

Sharp attacks on the Welfare Department for its secret cutting off of fuel and medicine supplies to 1500 mothers on Boston's welfare list are to be made at today's special City Council meeting.

Meanwhile, explanations of members of the Board of Overseers and administrative heads of the Welfare Department differ widely in interpreting the action.

The order means that allotments of coal and medicine given to 1515 mothers without charge for a number of years have been stopped, at an estimated saving of $35,000.

City councillors were bitter over the action, and predicted that there would be plenty of fireworks on the question during their meeting today.

Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., of Dorchester, declared he would introduce an order calling on the overseers to reverse the action.

"I will also ask that Welfare Director John C. L. Dowling be questioned by the council," Wilson said.

of Aryanship than those contained in the law itself.

This was seen as another move by Hitler to protect distinguished Germans of partial Jewish ancestry. It protects them against being ousted by honor organizations and other important groups and allows many of those already ousted to rejoin.

HITLER TO DECIDE

Hitler has reserved for himself the final decision in the making of exceptions for special cases. His ministers, Wilhelm Frick, Rudolf Hess and Minister of Justice Gurtner will act as administrative judges in this respect.

Foreigners are largely exempted by the regulations which provide that they can be prosecuted only with special consent of Frick or Gurtner.

Foreigners residing in Germany who are not citizens of other countries come under the regulations.

Under the regulations announced today only citizens can hold office or public employment. All others must quit their jobs by December 31. They will receive pensions if they served in the World War.

MARRIAGES BANNED

Jews are defined as persons with three or more Jewish grandparents or any one married to a Jew or with certain other Jewish connections.

No Jew can marry a person of mixed blood in the classification of citizens.

Persons of mixed blood cannot marry one another, under the regulations, which decree that "no marriage will be allowed that involves danger of pollution."

Before marriage either Jew or Aryan must produce a certificate of physical fitness and in the event a foreigner is involved on one side the ministry of the interior must be consulted.

Sound Stage Dedicated to Will Rogers

Hollywood, Nov. 15 (INS)—A magnificent sound stage stood dedicated here today to the memory of Will Rogers.

With 200 close personal friends and associates of the late comedian and stage attendance, the youngest of the group, Shirley Temple, yesterday pulled the cord which unveiled a bronze plaque on the $25,000 sound stage.

The plaque reads:

"Will Rogers, 1879-1935. This stage we dedicate to your memory. Will Rogers, you who made the whole world laugh and the whole world love you."

Among those attending were Rudolph Hughes, writer, who acted as toastmaster; Fred Stone, actor and closest friend of Rogers; Billie Burke, actress, lifelong friend of the comedian; Irvin S. Cobb, writer; Frank Merriam, governor of California; B. B. Moeur, governor of Arizona; Louis B. Mayer, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers; Will Rogers, Jr., son of the noted cowboy humorist, and scores of civic leaders, film executives and picture notables.

HULTMAN TOLD TO AID JOBLESS

Governor Curley today instructed Chairman Eugene C. Hultman of the Metropolitan District Commission to confer with WPA Administrator Rotch in an effort to get federal funds for sidewalk work and other projects on which jobless men in Boston can be employed.

The Governor pointed out that the $28,000,000 authorized for the state are all outside Boston and that sidewalk work on state highways within the city has been accomplished.

He pointed out that relief for those who have refrained from going on the welfare in Boston is entirely in the hands of Administrator Rotch and Mayor Mansfield.

He expressed the opinion that the Boston municipal and federal agencies could well spend 25 per cent of the money to take care of the Boston situation.

Decision Delayed On Farquhar Will

Decision on the second legal battle to break the will of the late Mrs. Jennie H. Farquhar, who cut off her relatives in favor of a $30,000 bequest to W. Edwin Ulmer, former Boston attorney, will be made November 25, Judge Joseph R. McConle ruled today in Dedham Probate Court.

The case was reopened when the contestants alleged that in an affidavit, signed April, 1934, the deceased accused Ulmer of giving her drugs and practicing some form of hynotism upon her.

Certain of Quota

Enrollment for Massachusetts' 15,500 quota for CCC work in the state ends tomorrow with Miss Lauretta C. Bresnahan, director of enrollment, predicting today that the quota will be filled 100 per cent.

GUARD DISTASIO FOR CHAIR

Frank DiStasio, 54, Revere candy-maker, was under close guard today in East Cambridge jail where he is awaiting sentence of death for the Hudson "torch murder" of Daniel Crowley, West End laborer.

Di Stasio was found guilty of the first degree murder charge by the jury after one hour and 25 minutes of deliberation.

His son, Anthony, 23, is awaiting trial on a charge of being an accessory before the fact, after he was acquitted by a directed verdict of the murder charge on which he was co-defendant with his father.

Blanching, muscles in his face twitching, the elder DiStasio heard, without creating a scene, the foreman of the jury doom him to electrocution.

A short time previously, he had addressed the jury in a plea for mercy.

Chester, N. Y., Nov. 15 (AP)—Five armed men entered the Chester National Bank at noon today, scooped up nearly $3000 in bills and fled in a heavy sedan.

'BULLY' VICTIM WORSE

Boy in Hospital, Gang Under Probe

J. Albert Webster, 12, alleged victim of a boy "bully" gang, was removed to Massachusetts General Hospital for head X-ray today as an investigation was started by Malden police of the gang, said to number between 15 and 20 members.

Inspector John J. McCartney, in charge of the inquiry, said the leader of the "bully" band is a boy with a previous police record.

The entire gang has been summoned by police for questioning between 5 and 6 p. m.

The boy, who returned to his home Tuesday after an absence of several days, told an amazing story of having been beaten by a gang of older youths because he had refused to fight a member of the gang, a week ago Thursday. Later he found himself on a New Hampshire farm, he said.

The Webster boy is a pupil of Browns school. Superintendent of Schools F. G. Marshall said he would aid in the police inquiry although the school authorities had not been asked by the boy's family to act. The boy is under treatment of Dr. Joseph Arbetter of Saugus.

PRISONER OF OGPU

Pays for Lies

By GEORGE KITCHIN

CHAPTER 51

"The next is engineer B., who knows French," answered Petkin.

"Gn, ne, gn, out, out." Vaskov waved him aside and pointed to me with another "Gn."

"Knows English, German, Swedish, French," rapidly reeled off Petkin. "A very suitable man, knows timber and loading operations." He was carried away by his enthusiasm and started fibbing.

"Gn," interjected Vaskov.

He looked at me with his reddish bright eyes and at that moment he was the very image of a pig, especially when he emitted grunting sounds. I could not suppress a smile.

Petkin stood behind his boss and twisted his body to a comical posture, but indicated with his eyes that laughing or smiling was not in order.

"Permit me to make an examination," proposed Petkin, who evidently wanted to repeat the old joke.

A minute went by.

Then he suddenly turned to the prisoner L., who was examining the paper given him.

"Ta-av-it," he said.

Prisoner L. got up red in the face and began explaining that he did not know English well enough to translate a technical description without a dictionary, but if the comander wished, he would translate something from the German, or . . ."

"Enough, away, three days dungeon for you," suddenly cried Vaskov, losing his temper and instantly sobering in both manner and speech.

"How dare you cheat in the questionnaire? Don't know anything," he said to Petkin, crumpled the paper and impulsionately crossed out something in the questionnaire before him with his red pencil.

Then he wrote across the whole sheet: "Liar. Three days dungeon," signed and dated it, and handed the paper to the secretary Ter, who had entered to receive his orders.

The excitement sobered Vaskov but for a moment. After that the alcoholic fumes again regained full possession of his tongue and I heard him say nothing more except his repeated "Gn."

But Petkin seemed to understand him just the same. He handed me the same paper which proved to be an English bill of lading, and gave way to his playful inclinations, whispering to me in English:

"The boss does not know a word of English, so anything you care to put down will do."

I thanked him with a smile, and, standing right there in front of the desk began to translate the bill of lading rapidly into Russian, one word after the other: "I, the undersigned, captain of the good ship, etc."

The speed of the translation astounded Vaskov. For a minute he stared at my hand with bulging eyes, then his dirty paw snatched the paper away from me and his gaze glued itself on it. He continued puffing in silence for a minute.

I tried to urge him on mentally: "Go ahead, write your solution."

I mentally willed. The big paw reached for the pencil and traced with large red letters: "Telegraph Archangel advise when wanted."

Finished. At last. New horizons opened before me. I did not doubt that escape could be arranged with the help of some English captain.

I left the room and profusely thanked Petkin for the good appointment to a large city. Of course I did not mention a word about my hopes for escape.

That same evening we followed Vaskov's example and consumed a goodly quantity of alcohol. Two days passed in painful waiting, but there was no reply from Archangel.

On the third day Petkin made Vaskov sign a telegram asking for a reply and Archangel immediately answered that there was no further need of a man, as the position was already filled by attorney A, who had been deported there directly from Leningrad.

My plans collapsed. The chance of escape again eluded me.

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

When children of other, less "socially enlightened" nations, are still playing with toys, boys and girls of Soviet Russia are busy in school shops like this learning trades fitting them for citizenship in a proletariat community, where the "worker" is the ruler, at least in theory. How it results, George Kitchin tells you in his story, "Prisoner of the OGPU."

The visit of the investigating commission and the purge at the Solovetsky camp were not in vain. About the end of July vague rumors began to reach the prisoners that great changes were impending, that martial law at the camps would be abolished and the entire commanding personnel changed.

All of this information came to us chiefly through prisoner Yoslevich, who arrived at the camp in May and immediately was promoted to a high position.

Alexander Solomonovich Yoslevich was about 30 years old, slight and handsome. He arrived at the camp without convoy. His nervous features and waxen complexion testified to a long confinement in prison.

He was a Communist of the Trotsky faction and started his career by showing great efficiency in the Leningrad cheka.

He was one of the first victims of the democratic wing within the party, and had been exiled to Siberia.

He stayed there three years, then ostensibly repented his delusions and was again appointed to a high position in the OGPU in the Caucasus.

Six months later he was again arrested on a charge of having divulged the OGPU plans against the Trotsky faction to his friends and of operating a printing press at his house where the Trotskyists printed their proclamations and seditious literature. He was sentenced to be shot, but, thanks to the efforts of his influential friends, the sentence was commuted to a term of ten years in the penal camps.

The same pull helped him to an immediate promotion. He deserved it, too, for he was actually the only intelligent man among the obtuse personnel of our OGPU commanders.

Two weeks after his arrival he became chief of the production department and a fast friend of Vaskov's. Soon he had the latter thoroughly in hand.

He was energetic, clever, intelligent and sensible, scrupulously guarded the interests of his employees, released them from excessive manual labor, improved their living conditions, facilitated visits by their wives and generally was invaluable as a chief.

The orders were: to abolish martial law, to improve the prisoners' living conditions, to lower the assignments of work, to increase food rations and to introduce days of rest.

The commander of the administration was instructed to work out the details and was to be responsible for carrying out the orders.

Vaskov, who was used to the Solovetsky discipline, became confused, drank more than ever and entrusted all the detail of the new regime to Yoslevich, signing all the decrees which the latter put before him.

First of all the name of the penal camps was changed from "Sevlon," which was synthetically composed from "Northern Camps of Special Designation" to "Sevitag," meaning "Northern Corrective Penitentiary Camps."

Within a week the external aspect of the camps changed materially and the prisoners breathed more freely.

RED CENTERS IN 500 CITIES BARED BY N. Y. TRADE SURVEY

New York, Nov. 15 (US)—Communistic centers have been established in over 500 cities of the United States. There are 600 national organizations, and from their headquarters they own, control and publish 400 newspapers, magazines and bulletins.

Andrew H. Dykes, chairman of the committee on Communistic activities of the New York Board of Trade, so reported to a board meeting.

Dykes said the committee has been endeavoring to get authentic and unbiased information on:

"Just what is taking place in our country by aliens who seem to be so anxious to change our form of government instead of returning to the countries from which they came and living under the form of government they are endeavoring to foist upon us."

Plea to Business

The extent of the Communistic propaganda machine in this country is shown by the figures gathered by the committee, he said, declaring:

"We believe that it is time for the American business man to awaken to this threat against our national life and DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT!"

"Communism is an alien philosophy and has absolutely no place in our American life.

"It is a philosophy founded on destruction and class hatred.

"It has as its avowed purpose the overthrow of our established government. The thought behind the movement is that this can be brought about either by force or by legal action, whichever proves the easier.

"Shorn of all high sounding phrases, its objective is to enslave the individual under dictatorship and destroy the right to own and possess private property.

Undermine Youth

"World history proves conclusively that nations are governed by ideas rather than by individuals or groups of individuals. Further success in promoting class hatred in this country will destroy American political parties and the American people will not be able to resist the power of propaganda issued by an enemy who does not respect American ideas or ideals nor the American form of government.

"In order to oppose the propaganda and literature presented and distributed by their subversive organization it is absolutely necessary that immediate steps be taken to combat the false, destructive philosophies.

"American business men and citizens must throw off fear and apathy and go to work with sleeves rolled up to promote the ideals which have made this country the greatest nation on earth.

"Unfortunately, the most active attack at the present time is being made against the youth of America. The purpose of this attack is clear as expressed in this short statement, 'All young people who are NOT Communists or Socialists before 25 years of age have very hard hearts.' We say that after 25 years of age, anyone who is a Communist or a Socialist has a very soft heart.

"It is because of this knowledge of human weakness in the youth that our boys and girls in schools are being agitated into radical activities of every nature.

Work on Students

"It is time for the business man to wake up and realize his responsibility as a citizen and to support in every way he is able the teachings and philosophy of Americanism. The extent and amount of assistance obtained by your committee will determine how far we can go to carry on this work.

"Corrective literature can and will be prepared and distributed by the parents, and all those interested in the future of our country must take upon themselves the responsibility of seeing that every young person with whom they have or can make contact is shown the fallacy of this foreign teaching and the soundness of our form of government for their future happiness and prosperity."

John B. Snow, head of the League for Constitutional Government, reported that in the recent Communist-sponsored "peace day" drive more than 150 different kinds of pamphlets, handbills and booklets had been distributed in schools and colleges of New York city.

Red Plot to Undermine National Guard Revealed in Pamphlets Seized By Police

REPAIRS TO ARMORIES HERE BRING RADICAL PROTEST

(Copyright, 1938, by the Boston Evening American)

Boldly showing their hand, Communists in New England today were planning protest meetings against the allotment of federal relief funds to put national guard armories in shape.

Ignoring hundreds of useless relief projects, radical leaders have singled out one—the improvement of these armories—to brand it as "socially wasteful" work.

Relief funds amounting to nearly $500,000 have been allotted for the repair and improvement of 17 armories in New York city, and a similar allowance is expected for New England.

Evidence Piles Up

For months National Guard leaders have been heaping up evidence of these subversive activities without being able to put a stop to it.

Now a new flood of propaganda has commenced and the Young Communist League, which is disseminating it, is prepared to increase the intensity of the campaign until it reaches its height when the guardsmen are in camp next summer.

"National Guardsmen! Young Workers in Uniform!

"What will you get out of war?

"What will you get out of killing other workers?

"What difference will it make whether it is a war for conquest or war for defense?

"Refuse to be the tools of a capitalist government!"

That is the type of leaflet distributed among the guardsmen around the armories and at their homes, and the campaign is also carried on by word and harangues among these youths who are the nation's first line of military defense.

Without the army, revolutionists in Europe, where standing armies are large, know they cannot win. They use the army as their spearhead when revolution comes.

Army as Spearhead

Without the National Guard, the Communists know they cannot overthrow the government of the United States. And they plan to use the guardsmen as their spearhead here.

It is their trump card, as they plan the future, and month by month the efforts to subvert be guardsmen are increasing.

The movement aimed at the most patriotic section of America's youth is officially recognized by the Communist International as the most important specific task assigned to the Young Communist League in its treasonable activities in this country.

In their own publications, the Communists make no secret of the part which they plan for America's citizen soldiers when their "day of revolution" arrives.

Here is the story of the "coming revolution" as published in a Communist pamphlet seized by federal authorities in a raid on a Communist party storeroom:

"We Communists do not say to the workers that they have to begin the civil war today or tomorrow.

"We say that the civil war is the inevitable outcome of long and arduous struggles against the capitalists and their state, and that these struggles must be made the everyday practice of the working class.

"The overthrow of the state power, and with it the capitalist system, grows out of the everyday struggles of the workers. One is historically inseparable from the other.

"Then there comes a time when large sections of the population say that this simply cannot go on.

"The government seems to be entirely unable to cope with the political and social difficulties.

"The belief of the population in the wisdom and all-powerfulness of the 'men higher up' is shaken.

Soldiers Waver

"The clearer the class-consciousness of the workers, the more steeled they are in fighting; the better the revolutionary leadership they have developed, the more capable are they TO DEAL THE FINAL BLOWS.

"A time comes when there is demoralization above, a growing revolt below.

"The morale of the army and National Guard is undermined. There are actual insurrections. The soldiers waver Panic seizes the rulers. A general uprising begins.

"Workers stop work. Many of them seize arms. Many will have armed themselves in advance.

"Street fights become frequent. Under the leadership of the Communist party, the workers organize revolutionary committees to be in command of the uprising.

"There are battles in the principal cities. Barricades are built and defended. The workers' fighting has a decisive effect on the soldiers whose morale has long before been undermined.

"Units of soldiers begin to join the revolutionary fighters. Victory is assured.

To Crush Foes

"Armed workers and soldiers, including National Guards and Marines, besiege the principal governmental offices, invade the residence of the President and his cabinet members, arrest them, declare the old regime abolished and establish their own power.

"Having crushed the capital of state, the social revolution acting through armed workers and soldiers, will establish THE SOVIET STATE.

"The capitalists will conspire and plot against the new system. They will organize counter-revolutionary uprisings. The Soviet State will have to crush them with an iron hand. It will use force and violence.

"The Communist Party is the vanguard and general staff of the workers in their struggle against the old system, in their revolution. The Communist Party is a political party. Its aim is to effect the seizure of political power by the workers.

"There is a Communist Party in every country in the world. All of them work to the same end. Delegates from each Communist Party gather once every few years in an International Congress. The Communist International gives unity of policy and leadership to the entire revolutionary movement of the world.

The leaders of this Communist International for the United States territory" are William Z. Foster, Earl Browder and Gilbert Green. Green is the director of the entire drive against youth, including the National Guard. The leader for the New England "province" is Philip Frankfield, with "Comrade" Blake who lectures to intelectuals and "parlor pinks," at his right hand.

"It's all news to us," she said. "Norma came home from New York last week-end and returned to New York on Monday."

Her denial was added to that of Norma's father, Norman Brighton, ex-minister.

Automobile Sought In Murder of Girl

Upper Marlboro, Md., Nov. 15 (AP)—A blood-stained automobile was sought today as police strove to solve the mysterious murder of Corinna Loring, found beaten and strangled with wrapping cord.

Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist, said there was blood on the girl's coat when she was found in a thicket near her Mount Rainier home, from which she had disappeared November 4, two days before the date set for her wedding with Richard Tear, Washington hospital attendant.

Hicks believes she may have been lured into an automobile, killed, and then tossed into the thicket.

Denies Larceny

Irving Katz, East Boston lawyer, was out on bail today pending trial December 2 on charges of larceny of $700 from a Broad street insurance firm. He pleaded not guilty.

'PROXY BRIDAL' BEFORE JURORS; 2 TELL HATE

New Bedford, Nov. 15 Vesta Jean Isherwood, 18, and Gloria Fego, blonde 17, central figures in last summer's "proxy bridal" case involving Heskett H. Mansfield, Jr., Providence millionaire, worker came to blows together this afternoon in testifying against Herbert Sachs, one Bristol County grand jurist.

Their army entwined about one another, the girls who were unacquainted last summer previous to young Mansfield's marriage to Gloria under Vesta Jean's name, let it be known they were agreed on one thing.

They "hate the sight" of Herbert.

He is charged with conspiring to evade the Massachusetts marriage registry law.

Chummy as a couple of schoolgirls which they are, they were to appear as spectators and witnesses in the burlesque mixup which followed the ceremony in Seekonk on June 8.

"WE HATE HIM"

Vesta Jean, a comely lass from Nantucket and Gloria, the trim looking little Providence factory girl who married Mansfield, although a total stranger to him, sat in a car outside Bristol County courthouse and giggled at an interviewer.

"We hate that man more than anyone in the world," said Vesta. Gloria nodded in agreement.

At the time of the "proxy-bride" wedding Mansfield allegedly asked Gloria to act as substitute bride in the bizarre ceremony. Following his arrest, Mansfield, Jr., offered to reveal her under her own name, making it all come out even. But she refused.

"Why, I wouldn't marry him if he was the last man on earth!" Gloria gave forth.

MOTHER AIDS HIM

Meanwhile young Mansfield's mother, Mrs. Mary Sherman of Pelham, is standing back of him and has engaged counsel to defend him.

The Rego girl who is under probation for one year as a result of her part in the "proxy bride" case, looks older than her years as in fact does Miss Isherwood.

The latter, according to Mansfield, was a passive party to the "proxy" wedding which she was to deny before the grand jury this afternoon.

Woman's Body Found

Providence, Nov. 15 - The body of a woman, believed to be Mrs. Anna Spellman, 74, missing from her Potter avenue home since October 25, was washed up today at Roger Williams Park lake. Police had previously dragged the lake.

Gun Halts "Home Run"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

On his way home from a Long Island golf course, Babe Ruth, erstwhile Sultan of Swat, found himself looking into muzzles of police riot guns, while officers explained that he was charged by a complainant with leaving the scene of an auto accident. At the nearest station house, where he is shown in custody of an armed patrolman, Ruth "squared things up" by paying $50 for repairs to the complainant's car.

2 WPA Workers Killed by Blast

Kimball, Minn., Nov. 15 (AP)—Two men were killed and one injured today on a WPA road project during blasting operations.

Reports said the men were warming frozen dynamite in a tub of water over a fire and were firing up the explosive at the same time. The dead are Walter Peterson, 38, and Henry Peters, 30. Ross Grisels, 32, was injured.

LABOR OFFERS TO OPEN MILLS

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 15—Confident that the Amoskeag plant will open soon, the United Textile Workers of America's four unions employed at the plant today worked on a new agreement which will be presented to the Manchester Textile Council at a special meeting Monday night.

Meeting at labor headquarters here, a committee prepared a tentative schedule of wages and hours which will be reviewed by 12 members of each of the four unions in the plant.

Clerks and machinists that formerly had individual units affiliated with the United Textile Workers of America have agreed to allow the other crafts to represent them in the negotiations, the committee announced.

It was definitely learned that the committee will recommend to the textile council that no change be made in the 40-hour week week schedule under which the plant operated prior to the shutdown.

INDICT 3 ERA OFFICIALS

As the result of an investigation by undercover agents from Boston and Washington into alleged irregularities of ERA workers in Fall River three officials were indicted by the federal grand jury today.

Frank B. Tew of Bigelow street, Fall River, superintendent and technical supervisor of the ERA in that city, was indicted twice, once on charges of making a false payroll in two counts for the week ending April 5, 1934, and again on April 12, 1934.

The other indictment against Tew charges him with causing a false payroll to be made for the week ending April 19, 1934, and the use of government property.

James J. Brown, stock clerk at Brownell's school storehouse of the ERA, was indicted in two counts, charged with aiding and abetting Tew. He lives in Buffington street, Fall River.

The third man is Manuel Amaral of Lyons street, Fall River, who is named in an indictment against Tew as aiding and abetting in making the false payrolls. He is listed as an ERA worker.

FREE CAR GIVEN EACH DAY AT AUTO SHOW

The automobiles of 1936 on parade!

For weeks preparations have been under way for this exhibition of the last word in style, beauty and economy in the automobile world.

Twenty-six makers are exhibiting at this year's show which will last for eight consecutive days.

As the top feature of the exposition a new 1936 passenger car will be given away every week [illegible] of the show.

CHANCE FOR ALL

A different make of car will be given away each time. And every visitor to the show has a chance to win!

Drawings will be held each week day evening at 8.30. Nine gleaming 1936 models, the cars of the future will be given away in all.

The first of these lucky cars will be given away tomorrow evening. The exposition will be open until 10 p. m.

The success experiment of holding the feature each of the automobile industry in November instead of January has already met with advance response. The show committee is convinced that the move will bring forth greater crowds than ever before.

HALL DECORATED

Mechanics Hall has been decorated within and without to add to the color of the exhibition and leading dance bands engaged to play.

Whether the visitor is a car owner or prospective buyer, the display of 1936 models will be of especial interest.

The automobiles have already arrived at the hall and only a few last-minute details need to be finished. In addition, a number of trucks will also be on display.

SHOW HOURS

Remember the hours.

Tomorrow—10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Sunday—2 p. m. to 7 p. m. For the remainder of next week, including Saturday, November 23, the hours each day will be from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

And still more important to remember. Each week day night some lucky visitor will go home, the owner of a 1936 five passenger sedan.

ADVENTURERS FORM MANY NEW CLUBS

By the Junior Adventurers' Club Editor

Activities in the organization of Junior Adventurers Clubs in the Boston area and throughout New England generally this week kept pace with the rising stock market.

In Scituate and Weymouth, the Strand Theater and the Roosevelt Theater both held meetings while Club Emblem E. J. Hendern, in charge of Junior Adventurers' meeting. The Strand Theater clubs are the latest additions to the long list of clubs sponsored by Columbia Pictures and in New England both theaters mentioned started off with a total of 400 boys and girls as charter members. Weymouth's Roosevelt theater club began with a total of 300 members. At both meetings, held last Saturday morning, games were played, songs sung, a "Scrappy" book given to every boy and girl and a program of pictures which kept the "kids" howling with glee projected.

By November 23 when big meetings for both clubs are planned, it is expected the membership of each will have risen to more than 1000. Movie showing picture projectors, used to frame a movie on a piece of wall, will be given away at the meetings.

CLUBS FORMING

In New England word comes that clubs are in process of organization by the following theater managers: T. W. Ware, Bates Theater, Attleboro; Samuel Steinberg, Gates Theater, Lowell; S. W. A. Boucher, Empire Theater, Portland, Me., and Leo Young, Strand Theater, Portland.

In the Boston area, the Egleston Square Theater, Roxbury, again led all New England Junior Adventurers Clubs reporting on activities the past week. At last Saturday's meeting 18 members took part in an amateur show arranged by Manager J. W. McNamara.

MANY PRIZES AWARDED

Unlike other "amateur" shows no "booing" were used or gongs rung, probably because every one of the contestants displayed such marked talent that the judges were placed in a quandary when it came to awarding the prizes. Cash prizes were awarded to James Feeney, 3135-A Washington street, Roxbury, for an accordion solo; John Feeney, his brother for a harmonica solo, and Virginia Eastman, 42 Glen Road Roxbury for singing and tap-dancing numbers.

Other contestants in the hilarious amateur show were arranged by Director of the Boston American actress as judges the following:

Elizabeth Lamprey, 3304 Washington street.

Listen, World!

Have All Human Beings the Right to Work?

This business of women taking jobs who don't need 'em, so girls can't get jobs, for example, standing behind the notions counter for a week or two. What is life to them, YOUR notion about it all?

As an advertising scheme it's doubtless a honey. But does it come within the sporting rules of 1935?

But how about the people to find what life is all about and for their own [illegible] elsewhere and find just a [illegible] to work?

And [illegible] of people who don't need to work, but are willing to [illegible] for the fundamental right to eat, sleep and wear a little out of their pockets [illegible]

But how about the people to find what life is all about and for their own [illegible] elsewhere and find just a [illegible] to work?

And [illegible] of people who don't need to work, but are willing to [illegible] for the fundamental right to eat, sleep and wear a little out of their pockets [illegible]

WOMAN'S NEEDS

A [illegible] of which a part of our [illegible] and most yet all [illegible] more eventful chapters [illegible] for the regular woman worker. [illegible] to do [illegible] or [illegible]

[illegible] need be [illegible] a woman [illegible] fundamental right to eat, sleep and wear a little out of their pockets [illegible]

But how about the people to find what life is all about and for their own [illegible] elsewhere and find just a [illegible] to work?

WITH DYNAMITE?

"How would a man feel if it happened to him—a plumber, f'instance, or a union carpenter? And what would he do? Then why shouldn't we do the same?"

Which they thereupon proceed to do with considerable dynamite.

Would or wouldn't YOU do the same?

Suppose YOU were depending for your three squares—and maybe your old mother's and sister's—upon selling bobby-pins or swishing gorgeous gobs of gowns across astonished, swank [illegible] and suddenly the beautiful Miss Dauntless Doll or [illegible] Miss Nice Newsy [illegible] at'st with a desire to make the Society Page in a big way should come hurling in and strike bread out of YOUR mouth.

[illegible] Howd YOU do?

Many [illegible] probably. And [illegible] in turning picket and [illegible] the world what you thought of such piratical practices. The [illegible] who organize it them and the stores which permit them.

TERRIBLE DIN WINS

Cambridge Woman Gets Prize

BY THE NOISE EDITOR

Noise complaint winners line up today for awards in the Boston Evening American contest—and if the noises were pooled together it would be a very terrible din indeed.

The noisest noises listed by the noisy noise winners range from just slight and squeaky noises to those which almost would knock your hat off, so loud are they.

Winner of the first and capital award is a woman who prefers to be known only as Mrs. M. S. of Cambridge.

She receives $25 for the letter written to The Noise Editor and adjudged the best of all in the contest.

Mrs. A. B. Hitchcock, 302 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay.

Mrs. J. H. M., Arlington

Dorothy Connor, 85 Baxter street, South Boston.

M. L. Doud, 94 Hemenway street, Back Bay.

Olson to Star Third Party

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Governor Olson's speech night will start a third party.

The courtesy of the road is many that the governor will until the Republicans start the second one.

The governor's speech will be, "a new party—why, when and how?"

The governor asks the questions. He will answer his own queries. He also marks the papers. You can bet he will pass the early fall examinations.

Olson just won a hog from the governor of Iowa, he wants to be president, and Minnesota has the best football in the country. That's the first time we ever heard of a fairy godmother who allowed you more than one wish.

Frances Osgood, Priscilla Thorndike Make Debuts Tonight

THE NEW SOCIAL REGISTER is out and with it comes the usual buzz of excitement as subscribers shuffle through its pages to see who's who and if anyone has been omitted . . .

As far as we can see from our copy, the John Coolidges, son and daughter-in-law of the late President Calvin Coolidge, are about the only well knowns who have been dropped from the new edition, and this is perhaps because they have been transferred to New York or else have lost interest in having their names listed with the bluebloods and have given up their subscription . . .

FRANCES OSGOOD

But many names are included in the register for the first time this year . . . People are always asking us how one gets to come into this exclusive "400" list, and though there are several methods, the quickest and most effective is to marry into it . . . And this year several Bostonians have their dual Utopia of romance and a place for their name between the covers of the little black book with the red lettering . . .

Howard Slayman, the musician, took on a Social Register rating when he married Peggy Barney, and so did Milda Allen when she became Mrs. W. Gardner Barker, 2d, and Jane Winkley who married into the socially prominent Bartol family and Le Baron Russell Barker, Jr., whose bride is the former Leslie Greenough . . .

And while we are speaking of the Social Register, it is interesting to note that though Boston's many art galleries are being hung with an almost endless procession of the works of famous artists, it is seldom that the artist, most of the subjects his portraits portray, and even the ladies invited to pour at the tea which marks the opening of his exhibit, are all listed in the Social Register . . .

Such will be the case, however, next Monday afternoon when a number of invited guests will attend the private view of recent portraits by John Lavalle at the Robert C. Vose Galleries . . .

Tea will be served from four until six with a group of well known society women pouring . . . Among them will be Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., Mrs. Harcourt Amory, Jr., Mrs. John S. Amory, Mrs. Ralph Bradley, Mrs. Waldo H. Brown whose portrait will be hung in the exhibition, and Mrs. Katharine S. Choate . . .

Others will be Mrs. Stephen Van R. Crosby, Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield, Miss Natalie Folsom, Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, Mrs. George H. Lyman, Jr., and Mrs. Henry G. Nickerson . . .

Mr. Lavalle, who lives in Boston, is one of the best known of the country's younger portrait painters . . .

Frances Osgood, Priscilla Thorndike Debut

THE STURDY RAMBLING INTERIOR of America's first Country Club, which was originally designed as a fitting background for the rough, rugged uniforms of sport, will, this evening, receive that feminine touch which the decorators tell us is so necessary for perfection . . .

The solid oaken floor, made to withstand the scrape of golfing cleats and the heavy clump of riding boots, will feel the quick, soft tread of Milady's slipper . . . And, the owners of these tiny slippers will indeed lend the requisite touch for they will be costumed in a manner to delight the most feminine of hearts . . .

Fluffy, airy white net, floating over a silver slip, with handfuls of tiny silver flowers splashed all over it like stars in the milky way, will be worn by Frances Osgood as she and Priscilla Thorndike make their joint debut . . . Priscilla's gown is of gossamer silver-threaded lace over a shiny silver slip, and her corsage is to be of orchids and bouvardia . . .

The hostesses' mothers, Mrs. Davis Osgood and Mrs. Richard King Thorndike, will add striking contrast to the receiving line, the former in a brocaded metal cloth of blue, green and gold, and the latter in black velvet with a large white sash and bow . . .

House Guests of Miss Osgood

MISS OSGOOD has several house guests for the week-end, all of whom will be present at the ushers' dinner preceding the dance . . . Her cousin, Mary Branch Chisolm, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Felix Chisolm, have come on from Charleston, S. C., for the party . . . Miss Mary will wear a gown of white tulle over white satin, trimmed with rows of tiny flowers down the front of the skirt, and held up with shoestring shoulder straps . . . Mrs. Chisolm's gown for the dance is fashioned of gold lace . . . Miss Frances Smythe of Charleston, who will also be among the guests at the ushers' dinner, will be gowned in silver lace over white . . .

Other girls dining with the ushers will include Rebecca Ames, Esther Binney, Nancy Cassels, Nancy Homans, Anne Hutchins, Betsy Jaques, Nancy Richards, Dorothea Merriman, Anne Soule, Vera Bullock of Worcester, Hester G. Bartol of New York, Lucy Saunders, a New York deb; Hope Abbott, also of New York; Margaret Janney and Phyllis Holcombe of Philadelphia, and Martha Snow of Providence . . .

POLLY LONG made her official entrance into society's charmed circle in a beautiful gown of white velvet, with puffed sleeves, a Queen Ann collar and a long train. Her corsage was of lavender orchids. Miss Long's debut was in the form of a dinner dance at The Country Club last night. Miss Polly, more formally known as Mary Richards Long, is the daughter of the William B. Longs. She is among the debs recently elected to membership in the Vincent Club and also chosen provisional Junior Leaguers.

'SALADA' TEA

Tea Dance for Isabel Gardiner

"AT a tea with dancing" said the invitations and so the friends of Miss Isabel Gardiner flocked to Stellenbosch, the Brookline home of Mrs. Foster Gardiner, to participate in the delicate, ancient rite of afternoon tea.

Bond Miss Gardiner was a lovely picture in soft harmonizing colors as she stood with her mother to welcome the guests. Her dress was of white organdie with bands of silver lame, worn over an underdress of pink taffeta. She carried a bouquet of pink flowers.

Mrs. Gardiner, mother of the debutante, wore a dress of bluish purple metal cloth, while her post-debutante daughter, Miss Polly Gardiner, who also assisted in extending a hospitable hand to the guests, wore orange velvet under a lace jacket of the same color.

Miss Alice O Spaulding, a post debutante, acted as major domo of the tea table and was ably assisted by Miss Patricia Preston, Miss Frances Lowell, Miss Elizabeth Jaques and Miss Dorothy Pierce, all Miss Gardiner's sister debs, and Miss Sallie M. Kite of Philadelphia, Miss Eleanor A. Smith of Hartford, Miss Joan D. Holloway and Miss Ursula F. Fiske both of New York. Mrs. Andrew M. Pinkerton was another out-of-town guest.

Fashionable Audience

Much to the satisfaction of those who like their fashions to keep pace with the calendar, yesterday dawned a real chilly daughter of November and so brought forth the suits of dark wintry colors, which, up to now, would have seemed out of place in the abnormal summery weather.

Browns and oxford grays and black clothed the smartly dressed audience at the second of Mrs. William Dana Orcutt's Mornings of Diversion, which was held at the Hotel Statler yesterday. Miss Sidney Thompson, was the guest artist and gave dramatic readings from French and English stories and ballads.

Miss Harriet Blake and Miss Dorothy Thuringer, Boston society's two most active students of the dance, both wore the dark wintery colors. Miss Blake was in deep red trimmed with bands of black fur, and Miss Thuringer wore all black.

RELIEF, BONUS MAY UPSET U.S. BUDGET

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 13—Advance speculation on the size of the forthcoming 1936-37 federal budget is proving somewhat embarrassing to President Roosevelt and to some slightly irritating, if some of his offhand remarks are to be taken literally.

The President is objecting to all newspaper efforts to peg the new budget in advance for several pertinent reasons.

STUDY RELIEF NEEDS

1—The Executive, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and acting Budget Director Daniel Bell are not ready to set down any final figures until they can get a better perspective of business recovery and of federal relief needs for the coming fiscal year.

2 In connection with relief needs the President is being torn between two schools of thought. One, allegedly headed by WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, is said to favor another huge sum for pump-priming, approximating the four-billion-dollar fund now being exhausted. The other, looking to an early balanced budget, is urging that public works and unemployment aid be limited to a billion dollars in 1936-37.

BONUS SITUATION

3 The President can detect many advance indications that the Congress assembling in January will pass an immediate soldiers' bonus bill even over his veto. This alone would saddle around two billions additional on the government for payment during the year 1936.

4 The AAA's system of financing crop control with processing taxes is being attacked in the Supreme Court. Mr. Roosevelt already has warned that a readjustment of the tax schedules will have to be made if the processing tax is knocked out.

Choice Pork Recipes

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

When planning meals do you stop and figure how often we depend on pork to give flavor and satisfying nourishment these days? Particularly at this season it is served with the vegetables and fruits for appealing and never-to-be-tired-of combinations.

A casserole of sweet potatoes, pork chops and apples is served on almost every house along with the popular pork chops with rice and tomato soup. A brand new combination is that of chops with sweet potatoes and cranberries and you will want to try it as soon as possible for your family or friends.

Chops are not the only choice cut of pork; as a matter of fact there is greater variety of cuts to this animal than any other meat animal—ham smoked or fresh shoulder roasts, bacon, Canadian bacon, spareribs and loin roasts of pork. As for comparative price [illegible] Economy is used but the quality.

We demonstrate a few of the many [illegible] pork cooking [illegible] with a roast shoulder baked with orange sauce and a most delicious combining ham and pork as well as the cranberry casserole.

PORK CHOPS AND CRANBERRIES

4 pork chops
2 cups cranberries
2-3 cup sugar
½ cup water
4 cooked sweet potatoes
Salt and pepper

Place the cranberries, sugar and water in the bottom of a casserole. Over this place sweet potatoes, peeled, seasoned with salt and pepper. On top place the pork chops, season with salt and pepper and mustard. Cover and place in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.). Cook for about one hour. Remove cover during last 15 minutes so that chops will brown.

MEAT LOAF WITH MUSTARD SAUCE

1 pound uncooked ham, ground (shank end)
1 pound fresh pork, ground
1 onion, chopped fine
1 cup sifted bread crumbs
1 egg
Pepper

Ask your market man to grind the ham and pork together twice. Blend all the ingredients thoroughly and turn into an oiled ring mold eight inches in diameter. Bake 1½ hours in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. Unmold and serve with a mustard sauce. Arrange carrots and peas in center of mold, if desired.

MUSTARD SAUCE

½ cup mustard
1 bouillon cube
1-8 cup sugar
½ cup mild vinegar
1 egg

Beat the egg, heat the remaining ingredients and when the bouillon cube is dissolved pour onto the egg. Serve hot without allowing sauce to boil.

ROAST SHOULDER

Place the shoulder in a roaster. Cover with Orange Sauce. Place in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., and bake uncovered, for 3 hours. When the roast has baked for 1½ hours, place sweet potatoes around the shoulder.

ORANGE SAUCE

2 tbsps. sugar
¼ cup apple sauce
½ cup tomato puree
2 tbsps. currant jelly
Salt and paprika
Juice of 1 orange
Pulp of 1 orange
Grated rind of 1 orange

Caramelize sugar, add sauce, puree, jelly, salt and paprika. Cook until the mixture is well blended. Add orange juice, pulp and rind. Pour over the ham.

U.S. PARDONS 60 AS FILIPINOS TAKE REINS

Manila, P. I., Nov. 15 (AP)—By the pardoning of 60 political prisoners the final act of colonial rule in America's 37-year possession of the Philippines was performed today as the Filipinos took over the government of their own land.

After the inauguration of Manuel Quezon as first president of the commonwealth, Frank Murphy, retiring governor-general, announced his action.

"I think this will set an example of liberalism to the new government," he confided to friends.

Some of the released were members of the mysterious numbered organization, Secret Society of Sitting Bull, which in the Southern Philippines was said had been in prison for [illegible].

POLITICAL PRISONERS

A few were Communists, but the remainder [illegible] arrested in the May 2 uprising, in which 60 were killed.

"These are all political prisoners," said the former Detroit mayor who was made United States High Commissioner of the Islands. "Those convicted of actual acts of violence were not freed."

After two years and five months as Governor General, Murphy stepped out of the political picture when he turned over the reins of government of the 250,000 islanders to Quezon at impressive inaugural ceremonies.

Rumors of extremist uprisings failed to materialize as the crowd, said by officials to be the largest in insular history, gathered in a huge square facing the legislature building to watch inaugural of the Philippine commonwealth and elevation of Manuel Quezon to presidency.

U. S. AUTHORITY

Quezon, who accepted the presidency with his promise to govern conservatively and to avoid sudden changes in the established order as his first official act, ordered all Philippine officials to "swear to accept the supreme authority of the United States in these islands and to maintain true faith and allegiance thereto."

The final official act of the day —and to Filipinos one of the most symbolic of all—was the entry of the dapper little president into the ancient Malacanan palace as its first Filipino master.

Charge Is Reduced In Girl Killing

Rochester, N. Y. Nov. 15 (INS)—Glenn Brasser, 20, confessed slayer of his 17-year-old sweetheart Muriel Hall, pleaded guilty today to a reduced charge of first degree manslaughter. Sentence was deferred until Nov. 20.

Brasser, indicted for second degree murder, has admitted to state police he strangled the pretty schoolgirl to death in her mansion home when she spurned his attentions.

In the group are Shirley, 12; Corinne, 11; Ebla Mae, nine; Charlotte, six; Dad William Hausen, holding Jack, three; twins George and Charles, seven; twins Robert and Roger, four; and Dorothy, 19. Arthur, 18, and Shirley's twin, William, 12, are absent, visiting their mother at the hospital.

Let Your Ice Cream 'Melt' Says Expert

Miami, Fla., Nov. 15 (AP)—Prof. H. F. Judkins, who makes his living tasting ice cream says "people are not educated to the fine art of eating their food."

"Perhaps only 10 per cent of the public really have a discriminating taste," he declared.

"The secret of eating ice cream [illegible] ers is not eating it too hastily," he said, "but in letting it melt a little before you begin, then holding the cream in your mouth until the taste buds gain the full flavor."

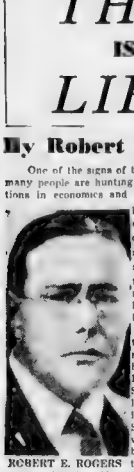
MILL BABY BAN IS SCORED

By Robert E. Rogers

One of the signs of the times is that while many people are hunting about for new inventions in economics and sociology to serve as panaceas for our present ills, other people despairing of these inventions are returning to the thought of the past and trying to revive ideas which one had believed dead and buried.



ROBERT E. ROGERS

It is only natural that the prophets of new systems should have their followers—Dr. Townsend, Upton Sinclair, Father Coughlin, and Major Douglas, inventor of the Social Credit formula which some of our best people are trying to introduce into our current thought. Share-the-wealth, production for use, old age pensions of the Townsend variety, silver and central banking—all these once heretical beliefs are now more or less to be taken as a matter of course.

People Still Turn Back Clock to Old Ideas

But people are still turning back the clock. A year or so there was a certain flurry of remembrance of Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward," with its dream of a collectivist Utopian state. And now we begin to hear talk of Henry George and the Single Tax.

As a matter of fact, this evening—Friday, November 15, from 7:30 to 9:30 at 138 Newbury street—the Boston branch of the Henry George School of Social Science, with headquarters in New York under the presidency of John Dewey, will open for a free educational course of ten weeks in "Fundamental Economics and Social Philosophy."

Single Tax enthusiasts will deny that the ideas of Henry George are dead, but it is surely no exaggeration to say that the once general interest in the subject stirred by George's famous book, "Progress and Poverty," has almost completely melted away. It is probably fair to say that not one person in a thousand had any idea nowadays of what the Single Tax consists and why it is a revolutionary theory for the abolition of poverty.

This course, based on George's book, will attempt to answer the following questions: Why millions are unemployed? Why poverty persists with plenty? Why depressions recur? Why nations go to war? Why labor and capital fight?

Henry George Tried Newspaper Work

Henry George (1839 to 1897) grew up in bitter poverty in Philadelphia. As a young man he went west in the gold rush, tried prospecting, newspaper work, and starving. Eventually he became managing editor of the San Francisco Times and began to ponder over the problem of national wealth and individual poverty.

The result was his Single Tax theory as expressed in his most famous book, "Progress and Poverty" (1879), which sold millions of copies in English and was translated into every European language. You can hardly read any biography of men of the sixties and seventies without finding reference to the book. Shaw and Wells testify to its enormous influence and educational power. It was reprinted in full in the Congressional Record.

Single Tax Colony Founded at Harvard, Mass.

In these parts his chief monument is the Single Tax colony in Harvard, Mass., founded by Mr. S. D. Warren. The chief propagandist for the cult was Professor Johnston, professor of engineering at Harvard.

The main theory is simple; in development as to detail it is very difficult and complex. I never quite understood it and even its experts find difficulty in answering objections to it.

The premise is that there shall be a single tax, on land. Land shall no longer be a personal monopoly; the value which is added to it by community growth (unearned increment) shall go to the community, thus furnishing its revenues. Capital and labor shall be free of taxes on production. It will no longer pay the owner to hold waste lands until the community growth makes them valuable. Improvements shall not be taxed, but idleness and dinuse taxed heavily. The theory was invented by the French Physiocrats around 1750 (one of whom was a Du Pont de Nemours) and modified by Henry George for modern conditions.

It will be interesting to see whether the Single Tax can "come back."

Torch Songs Done

GAYETY IS VOGUE

By ANN MARSTERS

Torch-singer? Blues singer? Deep-throated, heavy-lidded crooner? No, Gertrude Niesen is none of these and yet she can be all three.

But to be typed as such annoys her no end, and she says:

"No one likes torch-singers, anyway."

So you can't call her that because she is being very much liked in her personal appearance at the Keith-Boston theater this week. The phrase "torch-singer" seems to have lost its vogue.

"That husky, sulky, supposedly mysterious manner of singing," she said, "has had its day. And I'm very glad it's gone."

Those who saw and heard Gertrude Niesen in that magnificent fiasco of last season, "Calling All Stars," may have accused her of doing just that type of singing. But you couldn't say that of the present Gertrude Niesen.

Vivacious, Gay

Her manner is vivacious and gay and there's such a whole-hearted friendliness behind it that she seems to reach out and gather her audience into her confidence.

"I try to make people like me," she said, peeking from beneath the Niesen bangs. "Audiences like to feel that there's some delightful joke, some link of understanding between them and the singer. And a singer can give that impression just by the way she smiles at her audiences. They're no longer favorably impressed by the dropping mouth and brooding eyes of the so-called torch-singer. And I also like anyone to describe me in that awful phrase."

Nobody would—not now. There is something of the mischievous elf in her expression, and her greenish-blue eyes appear to slant up at the corners.

"I have a Siamese cat," she said, "who looks just like me."

Miss Niesen has six cats in all and two dogs. A while ago she had six dogs and two cats. But she had to give away some of the dogs when so many cats came along.

From her Boston engagement Miss Niesen will go to New York to begin rehearsals for the "Ziegfeld Follies."

"It's going to open in Boston," she said, "I think during Christmas week."

Going Into Movies

After that she will probably go to Hollywood and the movies, where she wants to do something more than just sing.

She is not entirely lacking in dramatic acting experience. Last July at the immense Municipal Opera Co. of St. Louis, she appeared in the tragic part of "Hugette" in "The Vagabond Lover."

During all the rehearsals, she was so embarrassed that she just couldn't be the least bit tragic. She had never done anything like it before—so she resorted to clowning through the part. Producer Lawrence Schwab was convinced that she would ruin the show.

But after the opening performance, he rushed to her with tears in his eyes.

"Miss Niesen," he said, "you are the only actress who has ever made me cry."

Governor Langer Jury Disagrees

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 15 (AP)—The jury that considered federal conspiracy charges against former Governor William Langer and three others today reported it was unable to agree after deliberating more than 45 hours.

Langer, Oscar Erickson, publisher of The Leader, a political weekly; R. A. Kroner, former relief secretary, and Frank Vogel, former state highway commissioner, were charged with conspiring to obstruct federal relief measures by soliciting political contributions from workers paid with federal highway and relief funds.

MISCHIEVOUS ELF

Abandoning that husky, sulky style of the "torch-singer," Gertrude Niesen now smiles at her audience. She has a Siamese cat that looks just like her, she says.

LOVE BURGLAR GUILTY

Cape Girl on Probation, Man Silent

Dennis, Nov. 15—Anger against a former suitor, which led her allegedly to break into his home and steal three letters written by a rival, brought six months' probation today to Miss Beatrice Ellis, 20, recent Yarmouth High School girl.

In allowing her to go free for the probationary period on a plea of guilty to charges of breaking and entering, Judge Robert Welsh, in Barnstable District Court, administered a "father's" lecture to her.

Lemieux had been pleaded for both by her counsel Attorney Henry A. Ellis, a first cousin, and by Deputy Sheriff Frank Howes.

EX-SUITOR SILENT

Both told the court the girl had never been in trouble before and apparently had become excited and acted on impulse.

The destroyed former suitor, Joseph Jenney, 45, contractor was also in court but did not go to her aid.

The girl freely and tearfully admitted her guilt in the taking of three love letters from Jenney's home, letters written by another woman.

She had been arrested by Deputy Sheriff Lester O'Neil, who was compelled to go to Boston today because of the death of a sister, but who had planned also to plead for her.

ROMANCE ON ROCKS

The girl, according to Deputy O'Neil confessed to him that she entered the Jenney home and took the letters.

O'Neil said the girl had been keeping company with Jenney for the past year and that the romance was common knowledge.

Two weeks ago, O'Neil said the girl told him their romance ended.

He summoned O'Neil and Deputy Sheriff Frank Howes for an investigation and told them Miss Ellis was probably the culprit, O'Neil said.

Last night, O'Neil said, the young woman confessed to him that she had broken into Jenney's home.

She told him she knew the other woman, a resident of Fairhaven, was writing to him and she wanted to get the letters.

Peabody Strike Looms

COMPLAINT TO STATE

In the face of denials, a charge that women workers in the Pequot Mills and Danvers Bleachery, Peabody, have been threatened with discharge if they marry or have more babies was given today to the State Board of Conciliation.

According to Wilfred L. Levesque(business agent for the Sheeting Workers' Union, which includes most of the 2400 employes, enforcement of the anti-marriage-and-baby rule has been indicated.

New strike troubles threatened both plants in Peabody.

J. Foster Smith, company agent said such a ruling regarding motherhood was made in 1932 but had not been enforced recently.

He declared the matter was to be taken up at a conference, but that up to the present time there has been no statement or order to that effect.

Levesque revealed that the situation was only one of several examples of friction that had started since resumption of relations between the mill and the workers.

In regard to the marriage and motherhood ban, Levesque said:

"Married women at the mill have told me they would be discharged if they had a child. I am investigating a particular case that happened since the workers went back.

"A girl recently married came to me and said, 'I have lost my job because I got married.' This happened only last week.

"As a result there is great apprehension among the rest of the women workers. Sixty per cent of the workers are married women."

Relief Tape Costs Veteran Relief

Walter R. Madan, Lynn state aid and soldiers relief officer, found that Baruzzi had lived in Swampscott until five years ago. Relief should be furnished by that town, Madan said.

DR. HANEY ON ROOSEVELT

Administration Is GREATLY INCREASING Ordinary Expenses

By Lewis Haney
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Nov. 15—I have a letter frmo a California reader enclosing an editorial. This editorial states that (1) The Roosevelt administration is holding ordinary expenditures within annual income. (2) That its extraordinary expenditures are constructive and therefore justified; and (3) That anyhow it is fair enough to soak wealth and give the average American "his place in the sun."

The Roosevelt administration, contrary to its pledges, is greatly increasing ordinary expenses, as I will prove. In order to maintain a show of balancing, it has put on burdensome taxes, and it has thrown public works and unemployment relief out of its accounting of ordinary expenses.

After a very slight reduction in expenditures in 1934, Mr. Roosevelt reversed the trend and increased "ordinary" expenditures 14 8 per cent in 1935. At $3 1 billion, they were above any year between 1921 and 1929. For 1936, he promises an increase of about 30 per cent—an increase of over half a billion.

Meanwhile, taxes have increased to a point where the average motorist pays $62 a year direct taxes on his automobile, and $32 a year in gasoline taxes The smoker pays over half the price of a pack of cigarettes to the government, and at one pack a day that means $21 a year.

And at that, the administration does not include all its recurrent expenses in its ordinary or general account.

* * *

The true way to put it is that the Roosevelt administration has raised taxes enough to cover that part of its increased spending which it chooses to call "ordinary."

By increasing its regular recurrent expenses, it has eaten upall its revenue, and thus forced us to borrow and beg into debt for the rest of the spending.

The largest item of regular expense is interest on public debt. This item has not been reduced. It has been increased. It was $756 million in 1933, and $820 million in 1935. It has increased 31 per cent since 1931.

This is a terrible showing. By artificially reducing money rates and by borrowing chiefly on short-term notes and bills, it has reduced the rate of interest the government pays. But it has so swelled the total debt that it actually pays a larger sum.

In addition, it has increased military expenses, jumped AAA spending to over half a billion dollars, enormously increased the army of government employes.

* * *

In 1922, came the post-war low point in civil expenses. In March, 1933, there were 566,000 regular civil employes. In May, 1935, the number had increased to 712,000. Now it has reached 794,000. But in addition, there are 56,000 "special employes," and 485,000 irregular government employes. Thus the total is now much over a million.

Such is the fatal result of bureaucracy. Out of every 100 persons in the country, Mr. Roosevelt's administration is now "employing" one person, not including military and naval employes.

* * *

A large part of this expenditure is no more constructive than war expense, and far less justified. Wasteful fish ponds, amusement parks, leaf raking and ditch digging are no more constructive than trenches or barbed wire entanglements, and are far less necessary. Pig killing is no more constructive than killing in war.

And to what moral level has a man fallen who can say, "Oh, well, the other fellow 'got his' in the war boom, so now I'll get mine!" That puts him on a par with the war profiteer and the new era manipulator.

If that be the spirit of "the average man" in America today, God help America!

NEW CONTROL REASONS Capital ADVANCE For Market

TO CORRECT EXCESSES

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Is this recent depression the depression to end depressions?

Gullible believers in the new philosophy of a planned economy are likely to make such an optimistic assumption, just as many during the World War accepted as gospel the alluring propaganda that that was a war to end wars.

Political efforts to regularize the business cycle have centered around efforts to correct excesses in commercial and investment banking and operations in the speculative markets.

The vehicles for these reforms have been the securities act, the securities exchange act, and the various amendments to the banking law.

* * *

Of course, the securities act deals more with fraudulent and unethical practices than with the consequences of bad economic judgment.

The philosophy behind the legislation which guides the SEC is one of truth telling and full disclosure. This of course is desirable as far as it goes.

Under the new law the SEC is required to register proposed new issues, about which the truth is disclosed, even though the commissioners consider the project economically unsound.

As a matter of clear thinking, it should be borne in mind that we have not yet come to grips with the inner fundamental need of prudent alienation of new capital, especially during boom periods.

The nearest approximation to this question from the economic side was made during the war when a Capital Issues Committee was set up.

This committee passed on the relative economic merits to the country of proposed seekers after new capital, and classified them in order of priority in accordance with the validity of their needs.

This was done less to protect the private investing public as to assure that the available supply of capital would be employed in the manner most beneficial to the country as a whole when it was mobilized for war.

* * *

At a time when private initiative is already restricted under bureaucracy, there would probably be a lack of enthusiasm for a new bureaucracy to pass upon the priority of needs for capital.

The absence of such a coordinating, integrating agency during the boom which culminated in October, 1929, was a pivotal point of weakness in the whole economic setup.

MAINSTAY IS INVESTMENT

By B. C. Forbes
Stocks again climbed at a very lively pace yesterday to a new four-year pinnacle.

Also from Europe.

The mainstay of the advance is investment rather than speculative demand. Not a few professional operators started going short some time ago, confident that, after its long-sustained and almost uninterrupted advance, the market was due for a more or less severe setback, even if only temporary.

Dilapidated bonds now yield very meager income, not appreciably more, in many cases, than government issues are allowing for the latter's tax exemption.

The rise in second-rate bonds has almost kept pace with investment stocks, with the result that "bargains" are no longer numerous.

* * *

Thus is investment demand being influenced towards shares commanding respect. It is true that few of them offer a satisfactory income yield on their present price and dividend rate. But buyers are for greater possibilities for advance in such securities than in bonds. They are capitalizing their hopes.

This hopefulness has these ten foundations.

First—America is displaying impressive recuperative powers.

Second—Most corporations are in better shape now than they have either already improved their dividend payments or are expected to.

Third—Investments yielding fixed income have so advanced that the return is now unattractive.

Seventh—The employing classes are constantly on the shift in public sentiment towards preservation of Americanism.

Eighth—The new Supreme Court is depended upon to nullify some, even most, of the New Deal's most flagrant anti-business laws and decrees.

Ninth—This depression has already outrun the full normal length of depressions.

Tenth—Sentiment in general has become more optimistic

RETAIL SALES GAIN

Best Since December 1934

Sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas for September, 1935, were at the highest level since December of 1934. For this season of the year the September index of dollar value of such sales was well above normal.

The average monthly sales in 1929, 1930 and 1931 are equal to 100. Based on estimates by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, rural merchandise sales were 103.7 in September.

In comparison on the accompanying chart is the trend of department store sales, as compiled by the Department of Commerce These sales were also the highest since December, 1934, but below the average for the base period.

Farmers have received generous returns for their marketings (and non-marketings), and their purchases have satisfactorily responded. At the same time the city dweller has also been buying in department stores at a higher rate

A striking similarity in trend of the two lines is apparent. Since the two sales indices are not adjusted for seasonal trend the sharp gains of the year-end contrast with the valleys of summer sluggish ness

HUGE GOLD LOSS

Bank of France Reports

By Associated Press
New York, Nov. 15—Fears are expressed in Wall Street that the French parliament, meeting next week, may toss a monkey wrench into the delicately balanced budget mechanism of Premier Laval.

At present, they explain, Laval is caught in an ever-tightening vise. From one side he is being squeezed by the pro-devaluation faction which protests against the bitter deflation dose contained in his drastic economy decrees. From the other, pressure is being applied by those who are continued stringent economy and budget-balance as the only means of avoiding a collapse of French credit.

Should the Laval government fall on the budget issue—as some think it might—gold in increasing amounts would flee from France.

Some maintain that the British equalization fund would immediately take steps to prevent too much of this capital from flowing to London, for French demand for the pound sterling would tend to lift that currency and leave British exporters at a disadvantage

Should this avenue of escape this be closed, most of this frightened French capital would have virtually no place to go but the United States.

At the same time they point out that the United States is currently the world's principal gold magnet. The magnetism, they say, considering recovery and the opinion, held in foreign exchange centers, that the dollar is undervalued in relation to most other leading currencies.

The Bank of France statement for the week ended Nov 8 showed a gold loss of about $44,000,000 compared with about $11 000,000 in the preceding week, a drain attributed by foreign exchange men to the fear for devaluation of the franc.

Bankers point out, however, that the heaviest drain on French gold has taken place this week and that the yellow metal siphoned off the top will not be shown until next Thursday's statement.

Estimates in banking circles are that during the past few days an average of about $10,000,000 in gold daily has been flowing from Paris to New York.

Whether the outflow of gold from France will be stemmed by the lift of the Bank of France discount rate from 3 to 4 per cent is keenly debated by money experts.

The outcome of the discount hoist-the orthodox method of checking the flight of short-term funds-will hinge on whether the Laval government succeeds in keeping the budget in balance.

BROKERS' COMMENT

Hornblower & Weeks—While the industrials and rails are consolidating their recent gains, we would look for the utilities to advance more aggressively. Profit-taking and renewed selling which came in the latter group recently appears to have been completed. We would also watch the metals.

J. S. Bache—A brief period of consolidation would be in line with precedent at this stage—the internal groundwork thereby being created for the recording of further substantial upward progress on several counts. Yesterday's rise might be viewed as climatic, but with so many favorable market influences extant we believe the acceptance of such a promise to be premature.

Paine, Webber & Co.—A practical double top now occurs in the market as a whole, and the market is facing a test of its ability to go through and begin another upward leg. The success of the immediate test will depend largely upon action of the rails. If they are able to rise another couple points the whole list should benefit. Believe traders building long positions would do well to pick up rails here, in belief they will at least attempt to lift above last September's tops.

Shields & Co.—Kennedy characterized the market as "gayer" than in 1929. Like that period many traders look upon the majority of stocks as too high. Some are, but not to the extent many believe when further possible expansion of individual companies, obstacles to important selling and promising business picture are considered. While these conditions remain unchanged a bullish policy for the pull should be maintained.

STATE Street Is BULLISH

LEADERS ARE CHEERFUL

State Street was bullish today on the morning after the largest volume of trading since February, 1934.

It was felt throughout the street that yesterday's record breaking transactions were indicative of optimism in the business world.

Ralph Hornblower, partner of the investment brokerage house of Hornblower & Weeks, declared that the present rise in the market was a healthy sign generally. He said:

"I believe that the improvement in the market is based on th . definite realization that business generally has substantially improved.

Hornblower

"There is a broad credit base throughout the country. There is also a strong latent demand for credit expansion.

"If Washington lives up to its promises to give business a breathing spell, the wheels will start spanning again.

"I feel that there was a definite turn last July and August for the better and that the market has kept abreast of that change.

"Today, I think that the market may be taken as an indication of further improvement.

"But this optimistic outlook is predicated completely on the government living up to its laissez-faire promises.

"If the New Deal continues its retrenchment, we are definitely headed for good business in the next six months.

Prouty

Strong bullish sentiments were expressed by G. Edward Prouty, prominent State Streeter, who declared that the immediate outlook for the market as a whole was very favorable. He said:

"In the utilities, I am bullish from a long run outlook. I am, however, temporarily lukewarm on common stocks in this line due to political pressure for lower rates and high taxes."

From other sources, came bullish sentiments. Several veteran traders expressed the belief that a further rise was inevitable. One of them, who declined to be quoted, said:

"The market is bound to rise. If business is given assurance of sound money then, with our present credit base, industry is certain to get going.

"On the other hand, should radical inflation come, the market will naturally react violently.

Newspapers Get More Advertising

By Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 15—Newspaper advertising volume jumped sharply upward in October Advertising Age reports today. The large volume of automotive advertising accompanying introduction of new models was given as a principal reason for the increase.

Automotive advertising jumped from 8,566,000 lines in October, 1934, to 8,025,000 last month, a 44 per cent. upturn.

Newspaper advertising as a whole gained 10 290,000 lines or 8.9 per cent. during October. The October total was 173823.000 lines, compared with 163,330.000 in the corresponding month of 1934.

Retail advertising increased 7.3 per cent, while general advertising decreased 4 per cent. Financial advertising gained 11.4 per cent.

Classified advertising was up 10.3 per cent.

TICKER TALK

Floor traders on the Stock Exchange accounted for the bulk of the dealings and they made the most of the large crop of favorable dividend actions and earnings reports in the last few days, and promises by a Roosevelt smokescreen that the "breathing spell" is to be made permanent.

The Wall Street stock trading community is convinced that for a while, at least, the Washington administration is going to bend its efforts to winning back some of the favor it has lost in the business world's eye.

Curb Stock Prices Move Higher

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 15—Although much of opening irregularity in curb stocks was erased in later dealings today and the market worked generally higher, advances were small and the undertone of the list only barely steady as profit taking continued to recur and reduce even such slight gains as were established.

The petroleums and the mining shares showed a more uniformly advancing trend than the rest of the list In the oils, Standard of Kentucky was in demand and Standard Oil of Ohio and Imperial oil climbed ¼ point each Coppers were outstanding in the metal section.

Newmont worked back to its high for the year, established at the noon yesterday, and Consolidated Copper substituted a small gain for an opening loss.

EUROPE

Buying SECURITIES In U. S.

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

When Boston Joseph P. Kennedy dropped in at the White House after his trip abroad he discussed "nervous money" with the President, he told reporters.

In the opinion of the former head of the SEC, there are three kinds of gold shipments which reflect nervous money. They are for settlement of balances, for safe keeping and for investment. Mr. Kennedy thinks the last named is the most important at the moment and adds that both England and France are great buyers of securities. The latter, as most of continental Europe, has always done most of its business with England. Now however, the trend is toward United States' issues.

• • •

With credit reservoirs at home full to overflowing, it is not hard to understand the effect of this buying from abroad. Securities literally disappear into strong hands for investment account. Home loan totals while up slightly do not begin to reflect the volume of stock buying over the past year. And regardless of intermediate declines, the great confidence which surrounds the American business situation appears excellent assurance that the long time trend of American markets is upward.

• • •

Notebook: Aircraft shares look fit and ready to go places . . . International Harvester has broken the deadlock that existed since early September . . . It looks most promising now that it has boomed its way across the 84 level . . . Johns-Manville from 44 to 80 merits the title of nonstop stock . . . It has only had one real five-point correction . . . Texas Corporation looks better than at any time in the last two years . . . Kennecott looks like a good buy on dips from here out . . . That 34-point was a tough one.

• • •

The general market is meeting plenty of stock as previous high levels are passed. Steels and rails are undertaking a herculean job in assuming leadership in this latest drive upward. So far both groups have responded in creditable fashion. We find their action distinctly heartening and only ask now that rails as a group exceed their August highs by a safe margin. Should they do so this week it would be a smart move to allow for a short breathing spell.

• • •

Briefs: Those who took our advice to pay close attention to rail bonds are sitting pretty . . . The sensible obligations appear unusually, had a brief respite and then stepped right out away again on the upside . . . Union Pacific, bellwether of the rails, told the story of what was to come when it bucked 88 as we predicted . . . Now watch 105. If it touches this figure it is a safe bet that the group will blast its way above the August tops. Don't forget the power and light stocks.

Shrinkage of Estates Under the 1935 Revenue Act

THE Federal Revenue Act of 1935 increases taxation of estates to a marked degree. Because of this recent legislation, your estate plans should be reviewed in that light.

The average man today thinks of his property as being transmitted to his wife, then over to his children and even on to his grandchildren. Without the aid of some one experienced in estate matters he is apt to select the most obvious way of doing this which usually involves multiplication of estate taxation and administration expense.

By a few simple changes in your estate plans the same result may be obtained and the shrinkage materially reduced. Also further economies, particularly in yearly saving in income taxes, are possible by a rearrangement of holdings during life.

We invivte you to consult our officers as to the advisability of making a completeanalysis of the property which constitutes your estate. Old Colony Trust Company will be glad to do this without obligation whatsoever on your part. Send for our new booklet, SAVINGS IN TAXES.

I Want You Only

By Elenore Meherin

SYNOPSIS

Nell Doran would forget all the drab facts of life for one night. She would go with Richard Calhoun—her adored "Ricky"—to the ball that night, and wear the beautiful clip of rhinestones, centered by a blazing emerald stone, which he had sent her for the occasion. How poor Ricky must have saved out of the sparse proceeds of odd jobs to purchase the trinket! For four years she had been ardently courted by the young gallant, just out of college, and only his failure to land a steady position stood between them and marriage. In the meantime, Ned Hamilton, junior partner of the firm which employed Nell, had entered the lists for her hand. Independence, a home, a husband to cherish her, were hers if she but said yes. It would be escape from her hypocritical step-father and embittered sister. Ricky was emboldened to renew his proposal by the promise of a position to materialize in a few days. Nell's response is "I'll do anything you say, Ricky. I'll go wherever you ask, now and always."

CHAPTER SIX

Nell couldn't sleep. She felt gentle to the whole world. She endowed even the gray morning sky with a tender beauty He loved her more than he could bear—wanted her more than he could stand.

For a week they were joyously, hilariously happy. Then his temporary job in the restaurant ended. And a letter came from Leo Edwards. There was no opening.

Finally he said:

"Nell—I'm not going to see you any more."

She cried out [illegible]

"I won't take it! I can't!"

He was very grave.

"Listen. Well, this simply can't continue. I've thought it all out. I've been strange and resentful, but we might as well face facts.

"I don't want to crush you, but I will if we go on as we are, hopelessly, any longer. I wouldn't trust myself.

"You got to get over dreaming of you and wanting you, or the first thing I know we'll be in a jam and you'd never be able to stand it.

"I'm not seeing you any more. I don't see [illegible] thinking of you and hoping. But I'm leaving you. This is our parting."

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Faces Troubles Bravely

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

After being engaged for three years, my fiance had a pretty good job offered him on condition he bought a car, as the job demanded that he cover a good many miles of territory.

Out of my savings I helped him buy the car.

Everything went well for a year, and we were preparing to be married last June when accidentally he struck and killed a boy who had dashed out in front of the car for a ball. Though Georgs was exonerated by the court, and even the child's parents did not hold him responsible, he has completely lost his nerve and became morbid since this accident.

He has given up the job, and says he will never drive a car again, though his license was not taken away. He has not been successful in finding another job, and I have lent him a good deal of money. I am now wondering if this is the wiser course, and if it would be well to marry him while he is still unemployed and morbidly nervous.

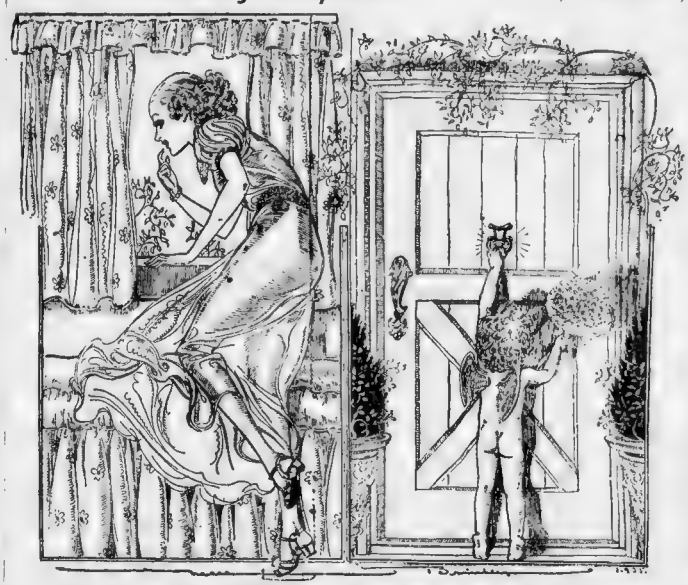
Since I have no mother to consult in this matter, I am confiding in you. JEANNE

Your fiance has had a horrible experience, and the only question in my mind is, would it not be better for his condition if you braced him up and made him more self-reliant than to continue to do the things which contribute to his dependence and morbidity. A little help now and then would be all right, but to make a practice of tiding over a man with cash, for a long period of time, does something detrimental to his character.

Better delay your marriage for the present.

'Who's That Knocking at My Door?'

By Nell Brinkley



THERE are many who hold that LOVE like opportunity knocks once, and ONCE only, at every man's and woman's door. That only a semblance of him ever comes to the door again.

I reluctantly think that the fellow who knocks the second time doesn't carry the same spring bouquet. Doesn't have the same mist of infantile gold hair. Doesn't have the same warm trusting heart.

I think when he comes knocking at your door again he is an old, wiser, less glittering person.

But I do believe that, unlike Opportunity, he DOES knock twice. He just carries different flowers, that's all. And different promises!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Chicken-Pox Cause Not Known

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

CHICKEN-POX IS a common disease of childhood.

Although it is a minor infection, it should always be avoided if possible.

It can prove to be very [illegible] Often it spreads one [illegible] from some other disease and in that event will prove serious to the weakened child.

The disease is [illegible] lagious and [illegible] spread from one to another. A child [illegible] affects children of [illegible] but I have known it to attack adults.

Adults are not immune to chickenpox, or "varicella" as the doctors call it. But because of its rarity in adults it is sometimes overlooked, or mistaken for some skin inflammation. Once in a while the adult patient is embarrassed by having this simple disease confused with smallpox.

Though the actual cause of chickenpox is not known, it is believed to be due to a germ of the virus type. A virus is a germ so small that it cannot be seen even with the most powerful microscope. Such an agent is often referred to as a "filterable virus," because a solution containing it will pass through a filter, germ and all, just as water does.

The infective material is spread by the secretions of the nose and mouth. Like other infectious diseases, it especially is contagious at the onset of the infection and for several days thereafter. In rarer cases the disease is carried by individuals who have had contact with the discharges of a sick person but who are not themselves afflicted with chicken-pox.

OCHRE-TONE POWDER

By ARLINE GOULD

IT MIGHT WELL be said that the composition of a smart, well-groomed appearance is made up of tremendous trifles.

The application of face powder is in itself a trifling matter, but observe what a mess it is when not properly achieved, and what wonders it does to make the face radiant when the color is just right.

To be fastidious in details of make-up is the first perequisite of beauty these days. The skin must reflect freshness and glow, the hair must be in order—fingernails well groomed and lacquered.

This business of finding just the right shade of face powder isn't simple or easy. And yet there is a matching powder for every type of complexion—powders for the tawny, ivory, beige, florid and gardenia types of skins.

While it's true that ideas of beauty change with the times (and for the better) a face, glowing with health and the happy color of joyous youth, is still the fairest thing to look upon.

Let me tell you about a sensational powder shade that French women have simply gone mad about. It is the new ochre tone and it does amazingly glorious things for the complexion.

Infused in this powder are the warm glowing tones of old ivory brocade. It is impossible to compare the ochre powder with other shades, because as far as we know, its color is like none we have ever seen before.

The powder itself is of a gossamer texture and has a fine consistency and adhering quality. It is exquisitely scented with a famous perfume, and when applied with deft technique gives the skin a radiance that is infinitely flattering.

When ten of the smartest and most beautiful women in Paris were recently queried as to what shade of face powder they used, nine of them admitted using an ochre shade. (Four of them were blondes—the others all brunettes.)

To learn the name of this new ochre powder, which can be used for all types of complexion, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question—My nails are thin and break easily. What can I do? Do you believe that it is due to an improper diet or to a poor physical condition? Will applications of oil help any?

FRANCES D., East Boston.

Answer—When nails are thin and break easily they have to be toughened. One way to do it is to drink a glass of milk with each meal and take fifteen drops of halibut liver oil after breakfast. You will then get vitamins that are necessary for the well-being of skin, finger nails and hair. Another way is to keep the nails well oiled. You can apply olive oil, slip the hands in old cotton gloves and wear them all night. Or you can apply a good cuticle cream or oil at bedtime. It will help to keep the cuticle soft and dainty, so it won't cling to the nail surface, break and form hangnails. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the name of an efficacious, medium-priced cuticle oil.

Husband's disposition was "Touchy"—because of poor digestion

. . ."Crisco has been a life-saver at our house'

"Crisco has been a life-saver at our house. Several years ago, my husband had an illness which left his stomach in a delicate condition—and his disposition rather 'touchy.' Whenever he ate pastry or fried foods, he suffered for several days.

"One day I had a lemon pie that looked like a picture and tasted just right. Although I had made the pastry with Crisco, I warned my husband not to eat the crust. Later he joyfully confessed he had eaten nearly half of the pie, crust (forbidden, after I had gone to bed, and it had not hurt him one bit.

"Well, now he can eat any of the previously 'forbidden fruits'—if I use Crisco in their preparation. And it is strangely true that if I don't use Crisco, the old trouble returns to both digestion and disposition."

New York Girl's Ghastly Shock at Stroke of Twelve

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

And if I make a few mistakes today, boys and girls don't blame me. It's all Sally Lee's fault. Sally's story of her encounter with a ghost just put goose-flesh all over your nervous Headline Hunter's body and I just can't make my hands behave.

Sally Lee lives at 58 Roosevelt street, New York City, and she holds down a bookkeeping position in a contractor's office between the Bowery and the waterfront. Next door to Sally's office is a Spanish grocery store where Sally likes to stop and purchase imported delicacies for her mother. In her spare time Sally helped the Spanish clerk with his English. And that's how she happened to meet "The Thin Boy."

The Thin Boy, Sally says, was the shyest, pallid-est [illegible] ever known. He was a friend of the clerk's and Sally took lessons from Sally and Sally found him very amusing and interesting. She looked forward to seeing the Thin Boy and greatly enjoyed his pranks.

One day, as Sally stopped to permit a funeral procession to pass she recognized the Spanish clerk in one of the mourners' cars. She asked her employer who had died and her heart sank as he told her that a pal of the Spanish clerk's had passed away very suddenly.

"Was it the Thin Boy?" she asked.

"Yes," her employer said.

Sally felt pretty blue. She passed the little Spanish store that evening on her way home and offered her condolences to the clerk who had just returned from the cemetery. The place seemed strange, without the Thin Boy, so she stayed only a moment.

That night several friends came to visit Sally. It was Saturday night and they suggested a few cocktails to help drown her sorrow. Sally says she doesn't drink as a rule but felt that in this case it was different and she helped finish the cocktails that her friends had brought and when they were all finished she remembered a bottle of cordial she had at her office and said she would run right over and get it.

The time was a quarter of twelve—the streets deserted! Sally says she never would have wanted out alone at that hour except for those cocktails, but she felt pretty good and hurried along the quiet street. A wave of emotion passed over her as she reached the little Spanish store. She was thinking of the Thin Boy—buried that morning—and the key shook as she put it in her office door.

And then, boys and girls, as Sally stood there the clock in her office began to strike twelve—midnight!

Sally says she never took much stock in ghosts before but as she stood before that door a strange feeling—that she was not alone—came over her. She whirled in sudden terror and then fell back against the door in abject horror.

THE THIN BOY STOOD BEFORE HER!

Sally says her first startled glance took in every detail—the face was sallow, the eyes sunken in the sockets, he seemed thinner than ever, he smiled sadly, the voice came very softly:

"I was very sick," it said.

Sally's mouth dropped open, her eyes felt as though they were popping out of her head, she felt weak in the knees and thought she was going to faint. But she didn't. She just started down that empty street as fast as she could run.

AND THE THIN BOY RAN SOFTLY BY HER SIDE!

"Where are you going?" she heard him ask.

And that was all because then Sally says she got her breath and started to scream.

"Help! Help!" she shouted, "My God, help me!"

There wasn't a soul in sight but Sally kept running and screaming. Down the subway stairs she scrambled and fell into the arms of a young couple. The couple looked surprised.

"Please—please let me stay with you," she pleaded, "a dead man is chasing me."

The couple looked around. So did Sally. No one was on the stairway. Then the couple looked at each other. The man sniffed Sally's breath and broke into a laugh.

"That was a g... k elephant," he said and winked.

Sally somehow [illegible] one way or other and went to bed. Her guests were disappointed about the cordial but as there was no more to drink they left. She was afraid to tell her story to them. She tried to sleep but tossed restlessly all night.

The next day, Sunday, Sally says she stayed in bed all day and that night she did get some sleep but her rest was broken by fearful nightmares in which whole graveyards were chasing her through the streets.

Monday was back to business. She tried to pass the Spanish grocery but the store was closed and stopped her.

"What happened Saturday night?" he asked her.

"Who told you?" she asked.

"THE THIN BOY," he answered.

And THAT, boys and girls, was the end of Sally's ghost. You see a friend of the clerk's had died, and he was very thin too, but he wasn't the Thin Boy. That worthy person had been sick, but was very much alive. And still is. And Sally is still on the water wagon.

And so we go, fellow adventurers, from adventure to adventure. Why don't you get on the Adventure Wagon with us? I've got a lot of ten-dollar checks where Sally's came from and a big "century" waiting for this month's lucky winner. The next check, for Monday's story, goes to Mrs. George Ford of Winthrop.

ROXBURY FIRE ROUTS 15

Fifteen persons were driven to the street today when fire broke out in the six-family apartment house at 42 Holborn street, Roxbury.

A woman, passing on her way to work, discovered the fire when she noticed dense smoke pouring from the roof.

She called to a passerby who sounded the alarm, and then rang the doorway bells, arousing the occupants.

The fire apparently started near the chimney under the roof, sending dense smoke through the corridors.

Mrs Rebecca Goldberg, Benjamin H. Brady, Hymen Devoress, Mitchell Grosbayne, Samuel Manuel and David Weinstein.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Second only to their enthusiasm for all model plane contests, is the always-present and extra keen hope of Junior Birdmen that their craft will set up new endurance flight records.

This hope will be alive tomorrow when members of the organization hold their second monthly indoor meet at the South Armory and launch stick models for cash prizes and trophies which will be awarded at the end of the series in March.

While the girders of South Armory, the low hanging lights and the comparatively low ceiling of the building, serve as almost insurmountable handicaps to the setting of records, Junior Birdmen will be there, trying to establish a new mark.

The present indoor record for stick models is about 22 minutes set by Vernon Parker of the San Francisco wing.

Efforts of the contestants will be tempered by the fact that the same models used tomorrow will be eligible for the wing indoor races on November 30.

Among those almost certain to be on hand fighting for the cash prizes of $3 for first place, $2 for second and $1 for third, will be Frank A. Barrett, Jr., "Bob" Shea and Kenneth Rudgell of Brighton.

'DOUBLES IN BRASS'

Actress Is Also Own Director

By PEGGY DOYLE

What the Irish Players have done for Dublin and what the Moscow Theater Players have done for Moscow, May Sarton, 23, youngest director-actress in show business, hopes to do for the United States.

Taking time out at the Peabody Theater, where she was doubling in directing and reading her own lines, Miss Sarton, daughter of a Harvard professor, declared that the search for a perfect play is "nearly as disillusioning as trying to find the perfect man."

"The theater," said Miss Sarton, "should be dynamic, free from propaganda. It should dramatize life as it is being lived now—today.

"There is such a surfeit of folk plays and social comedies in the theater, while there is a dearth of plays about today's most tragic and appealing figure, the young college graduate searching in vain for the job that doesn't exist.

"I'd like to put on a play about him . . . I wish he'd write it himself. I am looking for young playwrights to do plays for us that will have brilliance, light, style, chic, variety.

"The theater is one of the most tremendous forces in the world and has just as much power for good as the church—and I say this with reverence."

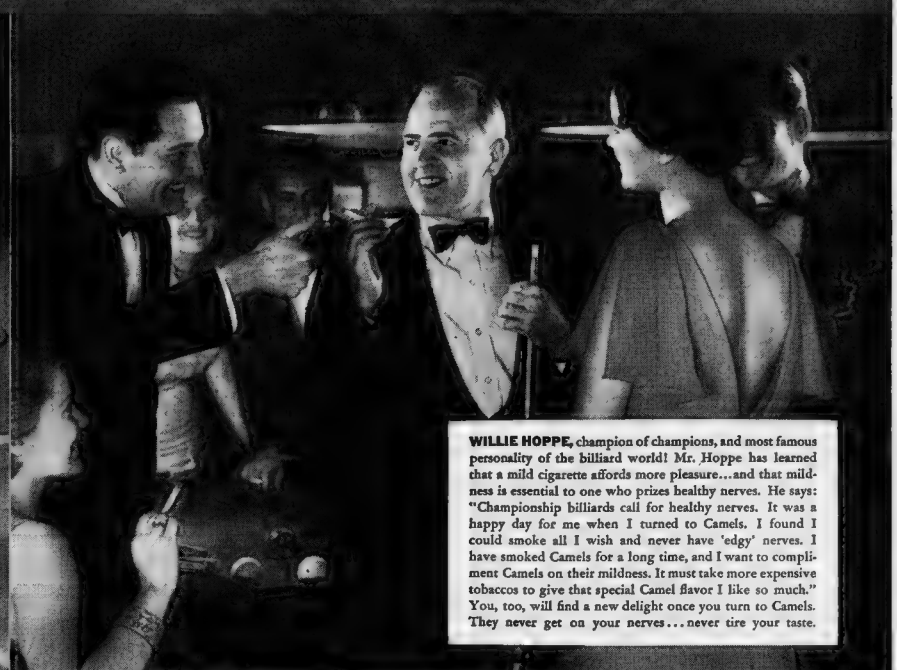
"Camels never get on your Nerves"
STEADY SMOKERS SAY

RECENTLY RETURNED from the wildest jungle fastnesses of the Upper Surinam River, Dutch Guiana, Mrs. William LaVarre, daring girl explorer, says: "My husband and I are devoted to Camels—took them with us on our expedition. And here's an important point: Smoking Camels steadily, I find, does not affect one's nerves."



WILLIE HOPPE, champion of champions, and most famous personality of the billiard world! Mr. Hoppe has learned that a mild cigarette affords more pleasure...and that mildness is essential to one who prizes healthy nerves. He says: "Championship billiards call for healthy nerves. It was a happy day for me when I turned to Camels. I found I could smoke all I wish and never have 'edgy' nerves. I have smoked Camels for a long time, and I want to compliment Camels on their mildness. It must take more expensive tobaccos to give that special Camel flavor I like so much." You, too, will find a new delight once you turn to Camels. They never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

LIEUTENANT COMMANDER FRANK HAWKS, U. S. N. R., famous holder of 214 speed records, says: "I've been flying for 19 years and smoking Camels almost as long. Breaking speed records tests the pilot's nerves as well as his plane. I smoke all I want to. Camels are so mild they never upset my nerves. And they taste better!"

THIS IS MARGARET ELLEN NICHOLS, expert woman newspaper writer. She has this to say: "Newspaper work involves long, irregular hours—hard effort—lots of strain. I smoke all I want, because Camels never bother my nerves. Camels have a mild, pleasant flavor—delicate, pleasing—entirely different from any other cigarette."

AUSTEN LAKE

Reviving a Harvard Legend; Haughton's Calendar

A LAST LICK OF POLISH a final exhortation of fury, and Harvard will enter its last week of preparation for Yale. But if the immortal Percy Haughton — P. D. to his old scholars—were alive and holding the reins, next week would be Joy Week, a period of spiritual inflation and happy frolic.

Austen Lake

Every week had a name in the Haughton football calendar, a special meaning that was more than the mere music in the phrase.

There was Accuracy Week, which came just before the start of the season, when the lads crimped their toes and focused a little harder in their plays, while Haughton stamped around with his face in a pug and yelling: "Get it right. No blunders."

There was Speed Week, which started the third Monday of the season, and caused the boys to spring their knee-knuckles and sheer off their body-bolts in an effort to cheat the clock.

It was a week of "double time and no canteen," with the players' pink tongues hanging out like flaps of a flannel shirt and Haughton chanting continually, "Hurry, hustle, fast."

And there was Fight Week.

Lately when I asked a former Haughton disciple what it was like, his answer was, "Gosh, it was terrible."

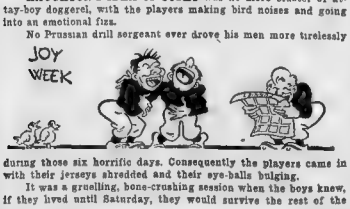
From the hushed reverence in his voice, and his wrinkled nose, it was clear that it had been a period of torment with a private Red Cross corps on the sidelines and the moans and cries of the suffering bouncing around the concrete crater.

* * *

Warfare Under P. D.

HAUGHTON'S IDEA OF FIGHT was no mere bluster of attay-boy doggerel, with the players making bird noises and going into an emotional fizz.

No Prussian drill sergeant ever drove his men more tirelessly during those six horrific days. Consequently the players came in with their jerseys shredded and their eye-balls bulging.



It was a gruelling, bone-crushing session when the boys knew, if they lived until Saturday, they would survive the rest of the year.

But Joy Week, which always came before the Yale game, was a charming period in which P. D.'s features dropped the pug and assumed a cheerful mask, while he told the athletes what assorted kinds of wildcats they were.

There was light laughter and a carnival mood in which he

O'Hara Insists on $100,000 Bond For '36 Race Date Agreement

By Jack Conway

Walter O'Hara, boss of Narragansett Park, says he will insist upon good faith bonds of $100,000 in the event he should enter into an agreement on dates with any New England tracks next year.

O'Hara told me he would not oppose any agreement that would include Rockingham Park.

"After all, Rockingham Park was the pioneer track in New England," said O'Hara. I would be willing to consider an arrangement on dates that would include Narragansett Park, Suffolk Downs and Rockingham Park."

I asked O'Hara what he would do in the event Lou Smith, director of Rockingham Park, did not post a $100,000 bond.

"If Smith would give me his word he would keep a date agreement with me, I might put up a $100,00 bond for him.

"You can count Agawam out in any possible agreement. That track has not met its obligations, and I would not do business with it.

"I have been asked from New York if I cared to purchase Agawam. I do not wish to acquire another track.

SMITH OUT

"Narragansett Park has proved the outstanding race track in New England. I shall care for my own business, and try to continue giving the public good racing."

Adams told me he was prepared to talk about an agreement on 1936 racing dates with O'Hara, but that he did not wish to include either Rockingham Park or Agawam in the agreement.

"I made an agreement with Lou Smith early this year which included Rockingham Park, Narragansett Park and Suffolk Downs," said Adams.

"Smith later associated himself with Agawam, and that track ran in opposition to Suffolk Downs and Narragansett Park.

"As a result of Smith's actions, I would not wish to enter a new agreement on dates with him."

After talking with Adams and Wilson, O'Hara issued a formal statement in which he stated he did not see any reason why he should enter an agreement for a tentative racing schedule for 1936 at this time.

He added he has not made any agreement with any track for next year.

Meanwhile the backers of Agawam are trying to settle some of their difficulties. The creditors have agreed not to press their claims until after the next meeting which is set for December 10.

UP FOR SALE

I asked Adams if Suffolk Downs would be interested in purchasing Agawam.

"We would not wish to do so," he replied. "We shall give all of our attention to Suffolk Downs, and do everything possible to increase interest in first class racing.

"I believe horse racing is a splendid sport. It furnishes entertainment for thousands of people, and also a great deal of employment.

"Most of those persons employed at Suffolk Downs live in Massachusetts. Hotels, railroads, cafes, and many other businesses benefit as a result of the racing crowds and from those who work at the various tracks."

It is understood that Agawam can be purchased for between $900,000 and $1,000,000.

One group that has studied conditions at Agawam decided it would be necessary to have a spur track running into the plant to make it a success.

It is now necessary to leave the race specials at Springfield and make the remainder of the trip by bus.

It is also felt that in order to put the track on a paying basis it would be necessary to reduce the size of the purses. Agawam offered large purses during its first meeting.

It felt that it was competing with Suffolk Downs and Narragansett Park and that it had to offer top prize money to get the horsemen.

TEAM WORK

Suffolk Downs and Narragansett Park both had less horses when Agawam was running than they otherwise would have had.

H-Y '39 CLASH

The Harvard and Yale freshman teams, two of the outstanding schoolboy elevens in the East, wind up their seasons at Soldiers Field tomorrow.

Yale, boasting a star-laden squad, which has won five of its six games, is favored to continue its victory string over the well drilled Harvard yearlings, who are playing their first season under Skip Stahley, former Delaware head coach.

The Yale team to date has scored 127 points to opponents' 13. Harvard in four games has won one, tied one and lost two. But its single victory was over Exeter, which handed the Elis their lone defeat.

Playing at least 22 men in every game, alternating the first and second teams in every other period, under orders from Head Coach Dick Harlow, the Crimson defeated Exeter, lost to Worcester and Dartmouth and tied Andover.

Yale, after losing to Exeter, 7-6, defeated Andover, 19-0; Roxbury, 3-0; Worcester Academy, 13-6; Yale J. V., 13-0, and Princeton, 26-0.

Yale's starting lineup will have former prep school captains, Bill John, 218 pound tackle a ten-second man from Roxbury Bill Humphrey, 170 pound quarterback, all-state back from Hotchkiss School; Al Wilson, all-state halfback from Episcopal High, Sharples, West Va.; John Miller, brother of Herb Miller, former Yale fullback, and Tony Mott, outstanding back from Worcester Academy.

Title Mat Bout At Garden

By Jack Conway

Leo Numa, the former "Black Secret," will be an even money betting proposition when he takes a shot at Dan O'Mahoney's world heavyweight wrestling championship in a finish bout at a Christmas Basket Fund show at the Garden tonight.

Numa's brilliant form in his training tussles here during the past 10 days, and the fact O'Mahoney was held to a draw in a one-hour match with Ernie Dusek at Cleveland has caused many fans to figure the challenger will win.

Numa has shown great power as well as wrestling ability in workouts. Leo and Red Roberts of the sporting fraternity to the hospital on Wednesday when he crushed him to the canvas with an inside crotch hold, body lift and back fall.

O'Mahoney has used his great strength to wear down his opponents and turn the tide of battle in one fall. He will find that Numa, six feet one inch tall, 220 pounds and 27 years old is his match in strength.

It is expected that the turnaway crowd of more than 15,000 fans will be on hand from Scollard O'Mahoney's Irish White Terror from behind to one of the most deadly holds in the wrestling game.

Numa almost defeated George two years ago, and has come a long way forward since then.

If he wins, Numa will wrestle his first six title bouts under the direction of Paul Bowser. The latter took the precaution to tie Numa to a long term contract for his title matches before he gave him the title contest with O'Mahoney.

THE PRELIMS

O'Mahoney returned to Boston following a tour through the West. Danno says that he is wrestling better than at any time since he came to the United States and that he will send Numa down to defeat as he has other challengers he has met here.

Danno does not believe Numa or anybody else can match him in strength, while he contends he is every bit as skillful as the former University of Washington football star.

The preliminary card rates as one of the best Promoter Bowser has ever presented so early in the season.

Other bouts pair Hans Steinke vs. Red Odell, Dirk Raines vs. Charley Streck, Michael Dobros, the new Greek champion, vs. Bill Doyle, Abe Coleman vs. John Snellman, Billy Bartush vs. Henri Legrand, Danny Winters vs. Hernie Olsen, and Kimpo Kudo, Japanese champion, vs. Jim Wallis.

Malden Will Win, Connell Forecasts

Waltham Favorite Over Newton

Medford Over Lynn Class.

By Will Connell

The welkin will ring, turf will fly on half a hundred gridirons, and thousands of townsfolk howl themselves to a whisper tomorrow as the semifinals of a great school football season go on.

Everett at Malden, Lynn Classical at Medford, the ivy-shadowed Phillips Academies' meeting with Andover at Exeter, Waltham at Newton, Salem at Leominster, Peabody at Lynn English and other games top the ticket.

Everett, beaten by Medford and tied by Manchester Central, essays to make its season a big success as it shoots for a win at Malden. The home team will try just as earnestly to make its season an even bigger hit by preserving a perfect record.

CONLEY BACK

The records show this series as one of the most bitter in school ranks. The paid always have staged tight games, with little scoring. And though youth tied Malden the favorite at about 5 to 3, even money would be nearer correct.

Everett has the physical assets of weight and power. It will have a notable edge on Malden in weight but since the latter has been outweighed all season that's no great hazard.

It's difficult to compare the two, for Everett has played a far easier schedule, but it edged powerful Salem and at times has shown flashes of form.

With Dick Conley, a fast halfback, backing the lineup, Everett is a very real threat to Malden's hope of taking top state honors. Both are at peak strength for the game, which will draw close to 14,000 fans.

Lynn Classical lost to Malden last week and it faces another wild afternoon at Medford. The latter trailed to Eaton Waltham 34 to 31 but now is out to offer even the heavier Lynn team.

Waltham, unbeaten though tied once, may have a harder time than anticipated at Newton. The home group, heavy in line and backfield, with a capable field boss in Ernie Savignano, has missed fire in several games. Potentially it is a top flight eleven.

Andover goes to Exeter with a chance for victory over its old rival. Neither team is outstanding, though Andover has Roger Rattley, ex-All Scholastic back at Boston English, and other able workers.

SALEM IN FOR IT

Regardless of the caliber of the teams, this game annually provides color and stirring action. Thousands of out-of-towners will move to the New Hampshire town for the event.

Salem, with its ace backs, Alec Juralewicz and Art Litka, but minus halfback Stan Eusko who has a sprained ankle, is in for a merry session at Leominster. Salem has a weight edge, but Charley Broderick's upstate team is a smooth unit and may win.

West End House Opens Saturday

Hardwick Predicts Happy Harlow Era

Foundation Laid For Winner

Which Will Come in Time

By H. R. Hardwick

Tomorrow against New Hampshire, Harvard is offered a welcomed and needed opportunity to gather together its rather badly shattered forces in preparation for its final and objective game with Yale.

Coach Richard C. Harlow has now had an opportunity to know intimately just what he can expect of the individual players under stress—an important knowledge which in the earlier games against Holy Cross, Army and Dartmouth he necessarily lacked.

That knowledge can be obtained only by personal observation and experimentation. It cannot be passed along by word of mouth.

No one else's estimate is satisfactory, as no one else but the coach, who is responsible for the team and who has a definite aim in mind, can fit the loose pieces together into the mental picture he has conceived.

Lack of this intimate knowledge of the material, a late start, an unfortunate series of injuries and a drastically hard schedule have combined to make Harlow's initial season at Cambridge anything but a bed of roses.

MARK WELL

The general consensus of the football-knowing is that in view of the circumstances, the progress evidenced from week to week has been along sound lines and that a foundation is now being laid from which future successes may be expected.

The other evening I overheard some official or coach in a gathering in New York rather sympathize with Harlow regarding his poor material. The sentence was never finished. Harlow quietly but firmly interrupted.

"No, the vast majority of those boys have given me freely of their best efforts. I ask no more."

So make this mental note for future use. Over a period of time, Harvard under Harlow will win her full share of victories.

He possesses the knowledge of football and, what is of even greater import, the personality to instil that knowledge in the minds and hearts of the boys.

Many of this year's squad are learning for the first time that there is no short cut to success, that success requires long, hard and exhausting effort, and that that effort is well worth the making.

JACKSON

New Hampshire this season rates a higher ranking, football-wise, than many of the colleges in its general category.

They have played smart and courageous football, and although naturally they cannot be expected to battle on even terms a college of Harvard's size, they can be relied upon to put up an interesting and determined opposition.

The return of Jackson, a veteran upon whom Harvard was relying and who met with an unfortunate shoulder injury in the very first game, will be watched with marked interest.

Whether he can have kept up with the work of the team sufficiently to be able to step into the picture at this late date and whether he physically is in condition to stand the strain of bruising play are two questions which tomorrow will answer.

Boy Wonder

James Caras, new boy wonder of the billiard world, makes his Boston debut this afternoon when he meets all comers at the Huntington Club and Eagle bowling alleys.

Monday he plays at the South Station Billiard Academy and Miah Murray's, and on Tuesday he winds up his tour at Murray's, the New Boston alleys and the Morton Billiard Parlors.

Caras came by the cue naturally, for out in Scranton, Penn., his father owned a large billiard parlor, and James naturally would rather play billiards than eat.

At the age of 10 he defeated Ralph Greenleaf, then world pocket billiard champion.

O'HARA Asks Race Date BOND

secretary, made an agreement with many of the horsemen by which they raced their thoroughbreds at Rockingham Park, Agawam and Epsom Downs in Texas. This assured the horsemen of uninterrupted racing.

Conflicts also divide the patronage, and by so doing reduce the mutuel take. During the present racing frenzy, this condition is not felt as much as it will be when racing gets on a more normal plane.

In the event Rockingham Park, Narragansett Park and Suffolk Downs should enter into an agreement on dates, they could insist that horsemen send their mouts to all three tracks or keep out of this section of the country.

The horsemen, smart in the affairs of the world, play one track against another when there is a conflict of dates. In some cases they have succeeded in getting tracks to advance the money for shipping their horses.

They pay it back in the event they win purses. If they don't get sufficient purse money, the track is obliged to take the loss.

When a track pays for shipping horses and they don't win, there is always the temptation to arrange the conditions of a race so they will get the horsemen in the "red," a chance to pay off their obligations.

Canadian tracks have suffered a great deal from this "shipping" evil.

It is unlikely that anything definite will be done on New England racing dates for 1936 until the latter part of next winter.

Meanwhile there will be numerous secret conferences in an effort to get together.

HANOVER SPECIAL DERAILED AT START

GREEN GRADS INDIFFERENT

By Bill Grimes

Despite the fact that Cornell has not won a single game this season, Dartmouth cannot expect to beat the Big Red team by simply tossing eleven head guards out on the playing field tomorrow.

Cornell is the only major game listed to be played in Hanover this fall, yet the Dartmouth Club of Boston was unable to interest enough alumni to go through with the arrangements for a special train at the ridiculously low tax of $3 for the round trip.

Possibly, Dartmouth grads are saving their money to make the Princeton trip, but if they feel that the Cornell game is as good as "in," I sincerely hope that the Indians of the North do not carry the same complex into tomorrow's game.

KEY WANTED

I was one of the unfortunates to witnessed two Cornell upsets and have been taught to believe that an Dartmouth-Cornell game, regardless of the relative successes of the teams, is "in" or even won until the final whistle blows.

I saw Eddie Dooley thrill Cornell with passes in the 24-23 game . . . And how he thrilled them.

After leading, 23 to 6, going into the final quarter, Cornell came back and nipped a victory in the last fifteen or twenty seconds . . . It was also at the dedication of Memorial Field, and another better Dartmouth team went down to defeat before Cornell.

According to Tom Keady, and there's no better authority on football, Dartmouth was none too impressive against William and Mary until its army of substitutes wore down the Southerners.

As many Dartmouth grads as can make the trip should be in Hanover tomorrow, show the Big Green that they are behind them, and not will un-d they have broken up lost to Princeton to offer their condolences or congratulations.

Jack Connolly, sports editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, writes that George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, has offered Clois Frances Key, alias F. C. "Ted" Key, the disbarred Union fullback, $125 per game and his round trip tickets to play with his pro team.

Ruth Nabbed

New York, Nov. 15—Babe Ruth was arrested at gunpoint and held at a police station before reaching an agreement over a minor traffic accident.

A radio patrol car stopped the former baseball star. He was taken to the East 67th street police station where he sat around swapping yarns with detectives until the complainants, Max Katz of Lauriston, owner, and Harvey Rubman, driver, of the other car involved in the accident, arrived.

Ruth left after promising to have Katz's car fixed.

SALICA Meets ESCOBAR

New York, Nov. 14 (US)—A boxing controversy that has raged for three months may be settled beyond doubt tonight when Lou Salica defends his bantamweight championship against Sixto Escobar of Puerto Rico in a 15-round return bout at Madison Square Garden.

A belated bettingt splurge by Escobar backers may send the brown-skinned lad into the ring as 8 to 5 choice over the champion. Earlier this week, Salica was a 6 to 5 favorite.

This switch in the betting was due mainly to the stubborn fight which Escobar, hailed as a "Little Joe Louis," waged against Salica when the latter won a disputed decision and the title at Dyckman Oval in August.

This will be the first bantamweight championship ever held in the new garden, and a capacity crowd of 15,000 is expected to witness the card composed only of boxing's "little men."

QUINN APPRAISES TRIBE

Decisive Meeting on Here Today

By Joe Cashman

With President Ford Frick of the National League, Bob Quinn, Charles F. Adams, Major Francis P. Murphy and Attorney Leo Bondy in attendance, the long-awaited Boston Braves conference opened in C. F. Adams' Milk street office today.

Before the "confab" is finished, it is hoped that the Tribal tangle will be settled one way or another.

Charles F. Adams, acting as spokesman for the group, came out of his private sanctum shortly after noon to tell the scribes not to expect any news of importance today.

NO NEWS

"We have a lot of work to do and there is slim chance of anything definite being accomplished before tonight at the earliest. "Bob Quinn is present now not as the probable new business manager of the Braves but as a representative of the National League to make an appraisal of the value of the franchise.

"President Frick, Major Murphy and myself are principally interested in that appraisal at the moment. When we get it, we can go on with our reorganization plans."

None of the other members of the group would appear for questioning.

The consensus still is that when everything is settled Bob Quinn will be the front office boss at the Wigwam.

Howell To Marry Movie Actress

Mexico City, Nov. 15 (AP)—Willard "Dixie" Howell, who won fame carrying a football for the University of Alabama, said today he has now won a bride.

Howell and Miss Peggy Waters, who went from Birmingham, Ala., where she knew Dixie some years ago, to the New York stage and the movies in Hollywood, will be married here on November 24.

The athlete will be 23 years old on that day. His fiancee is 21.

After the wedding the bride will return to Hollywood while "Dixie" plans to report to the Detroit Tigers for spring training next year.

Park Grid Loop Closes Sunday

With the winners of the two divisions in the top league of the Boston Park Department football organization settled, the Olympian club of South Boston in the west and the Mattapan A. A. in the east only two games are on the card for Sunday, to finish out the season's schedule.

The two games find the Mattapan Merchants traveling to the naval playground in Roxbury to meet the Mooneys of the same section and the Foleys entertaining the Scarlet and White team of Dorchester at the Fens Stadium.

The Mattapan A. A. and the Chippewas will meet on Sunday, November 24, at a place to be selected later, for the championship of the city.

would sometimes shuffle his lineup into burlesque formations, so that centers would be quarterbacks and fantastic plays that were not in the book would be staged, in which the boys stuffed the ball down their pant legs and ran for hilarious touchdowns.

Then Percy would spin yarns in the locker rooms and fatten the lads' vanities by reciting their earlier heroics. He knew that he had given them all the mechanics at his command. The rest was merely nursing their spirits as an offset to late season fag and the danger of staleness.

Psychology in the Raw

THE FOOTBALL SAGA, like the literature of the major leagues, is losing much of its personality over the years, and in place of the Haughtons, Rocknes, Cavanaughs, McGraws and Stallingses, who gave so much to the folklore of their games, a set of journeymen technicians has grown up.

In time Dick Harlow, after setting his roots in the affection of his pupils, may restore the Haughton calendar, or create a set of original novelties to enrich the game's history.

Like the half-hour that preceded the 1913 Yale game when Haughton sent out Charlie Brickley with a washbasketful of footballs to nudge over the bar with his gifted big toe. Which was not so much for Charley's benefit as to give the Yales an ominous eyeful.

It was a form of strategy which the Yankees used to use before the opening game of a World Series, when Ruth and Gehrig would swing at a diet of fat pitches and flog the balls over the distant screens while the National League players took mental note.

So, for 30 minutes, Brickley clicked his boot-tip against the ball and drove it unerringly through the posts while the Yales forsook their signal practice and stood up to study his skill.

Then, as a final flourish, he kicked from the 50-yard line, booting first over one cross bar and then, almost negligently, over the other, while the Harvard stands rose to squeal delight.

That was the afternoon he beat Yale, 15 to 0, with five drop kicks.

Nonsense in the Elder Day

AND THERE WAS THE age-old day when Carlisle, under that foxy dodger, Glenn Warner, came to the stadium with little yellow ovals sewed on their chests, which, at short range, looked like so many footballs, particularly when the Indian backs curled their arms underneath.

Warner had grinned provokingly and held out a rule book when Haughton complained about this novelty.

"Show me," demanded "Pop," "where there is anything in the book to prevent it."

"All right," snorted P. D. "Neither is there anything in the book to prevent my painting the ball red either, and a red ball would be pretty hard to see against Harvard jerseys."

"Pop" pondered. But only for a moment. "Yes," he agreed, "I guess it would," and forthwith ordered the yellow ovals ripped off his Redskins' breasts.

In the intervening years, many of P. D.'s old tricks have been snitched and tinkered with all over the country, like the hidden ball or spinner play, which was Haughton's invention, although a dozen coaches claim it.

P. D. had developed the stunt by experimenting on his pet terrier.

"I figured the terrier had sharper eyes than any human," said he. "And if I could fool a smart dog, I could fool a dumb football team."

8	Talera	1102	Maschek	20-1	Would surprise
6	Gorilloon	105	Haskell	20-1	Beast chance

Just have to give JOHN SON one more chance. This pacer turned in a sparkling second to Lassies Mary last Thursday. He is dropping 10 pounds and gets in under a feather of 100. KATE GREENAWAY is clearly the speed of the party, but she has never raced over the route. REGISTERITE is capable of upsetting the dope if able to get postawards.

THIRD—BEAVER, CYNWYD, DEARZIN

THIRD RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-quarter miles.

3	Beaver	2107	Jackson	5-2	Best effort needed
8	Cynwyd	2103	Gumpper	4-1	Speedy contender
1	Dearzin	115	Luther	4-1	Can better last
4	Carbolet	105	Howell	6-1	Should go well
7	Tuffy Jr.	112	Howell	8-1	Loses the route
11	Passing Mark	112	Ambrose	8-1	Extra good chance
1	Fair Lontess	2105	Hanford	12-1	Not out of it
10	Sherman	112	Ray	12-1	Improved last time
9	Jimmy B.	112	Luther	15-1	May set the pace
2	Our Pal	112	Barrera	15-1	Nothing recent
5	Ding Plan	2105	Monti	20-1	Beast chance

BEAVER, appearing to duplicate that most recent performance in order to earn brackets. CYNWYD was a galloping winner over weaker ones last time She figures close up. DEARZIN'S last race was entirely too good to be true. He can do better.

FOURTH—SOME POMP, BROWN JACK, LADFIELD

FOURTH RACE—$1000, handicap, "The Brattleboro," three-year-olds and up, six furlongs.

4	Some Romp	115	Arcaro	7-1	Doubled Salem
3	Brown Jack	112	Luther	4-1	Has class if sharp
9	Ladfield	112	Howell	4-1	Can better last
7	Switch	105	Rosen	8-1	Just out trip
2	Rock	107	Kapp	8-1	Rounding to form
6	Wise Nose	105	Gumpper	8-1	In light enough
5	Polar Bird	105	Short	15-1	Short last time
8	Happy Helen	102	Mitchell	15-1	Mud will help
1	Nemanhurst	107	Hanford	20-1	Doubled weaker ones

SOME POMP appears nicely suited to all conditions in his handicap. She has only to run her usual race in order to earn brackets. BROWN JACK, third to Happy Knot, was off poorly that day. He figures to offer the contention if given an even shake in racing luck. LADFIELD is in nicely under the 112 pounds. He looks to have improved.

FIFTH—CROSSBOW II, BROOKMEADE ENTRY, EDDIES BROTHER

FIFTH RACE—$5000 handicap. The Wannamoisett, two-year-olds, one mile and 70 yards.

4	Crossbow II	119	Arcaro	7-5	Downright and best
3	Snap	106	Connolly	8-1	Good chance at weights
7	Lindton Brook	113	Luther	8-1	Has had many races
1	Eddie's Brother	109	Scott	4-1	Tough, close up
2	Mr. John James	113	Ambrose	8-1	Has to improve
6	Barnsley	101	Short	8-1	Improvement likely
5	Abraham	101	Stout	20-1	Loves Maiden

g—Brookmeade Stable entry.

CROSSBOW II strikes me as the classiest juvenile now quartered in this section. He raced abjecto to good decision last Saturday. SNAP and INDIAN BROOM will run coupled as the Brookmeade entry. I prefer the chance of the former if both parade postwards. EDDIES BROTHER hardly classes with the top pair, but he figures next best.

SIXTH—MR. PETE, PROPAGANDIST, HIGH IMAGE

1	Mr. Peter	1102	Deering	3-1	Best on figures
7	Propagandist	112	Howell	7-2	Dropping down
8	High Image	1107	Jackson	6-1	Chance at best races
6	Ballad	1102	Jackson	6-1	Fast behind
4	Hocktana	1107	Deering	8-1	Best races in mud
5	Idle Andy	105	Howell	10-1	Drubbed weaker lot
3	Hogan's Joy	101	Rosen	20-1	Should go well
2	Parabeer	101	Rosen	20-1	Nothing recently

MR. PETE [illegible] six-furlong [illegible] with a few notches and figures to offer the sternest sort of contention. HIGH IMAGE is a wake-up possibility.

SEVENTH—DIVERTING, LIVE ONE, VOTE BOY

8	Diverting	107	Cooper	8-1	Best effort needed
3	Live One	107	Wolfe	7	Very good
1	Vote Boy	2105	Hanford	4-1	Excellent winner chance
5	Flint Shot	1102	Hazell	4-1	Fighting chance
6	Old Field	112	Helm	8-1	Appears middler
7	Mosby Time	2105	Deering	8-1	Chance on last
4	Fake	104	Stout	10-1	Should go well
2	Count Adro	101	Maschek	20-1	Surely out form

Digging down into the brine basin for DIVERTING in this number. This plater has been doing a world of ground in recent sprint endeavors. The increased route will be right down her alley. LIVE ONE showed well in placing to Thomasville. He can take it all. VOTE BOY merits better than a fighting chance.

EIGHTH—PATIENT SAINT, THATCH, DUNROCK

1	Patient Saint	2105	No Boy	4-1	All conditions suit
6	Thatch	107	Arcaro	5-1	Needs added mile
3	Dunrock	112	Watson	8-1	Money possibility
4	Secondhand	105	Rosen	8-1	Beaten favorite
5	Harper	105	Scott	8-1	Improvement needed
8	Bright Chance	107	Jr.	8-1	Chance in mud
10	Port O Call	1105	Atkinson	15-1	Would surprise
11	Free Lance	107	Hazell	15-1	Just a sleepy trick
12	Babushka	107	Deering	20-1	Not in form
7	Masked Dexter	110	Hanford	20-1	Not here
9	Tooth	110	Mitchell	20-1	Slow gate

String along with PATIENT SAINT in this number. This plater showed exceptionally well while racing up against it last time. He drubbed better ones in Maryland. THATCH, second to Mosmillet, will like the marathon route. DUNROCK figures well on best races.

SUBSTITUTE—CANTERSINE, LIBERTY OAK, LAST TIME

SUBSTITUTE—To be used if necessary, purse $1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, six furlongs.

8	Canterstine	117	Arcaro	5-2	Needs assault rule
2	Liberty Oak	1110	Deering	4-1	Beaten favorite
10	Last Time	109	Hardy	8-1	Can take all
3	Prom Girl	109	No Boy	8-1	Last race helped
9	Peter	106	No Boy	8-1	Improvement likely
4	Hastilon	106	Wolfe	8-1	Should go well
1	Dark Devil	1110	Deering	8-1	Surprised last
5	Marks	109	Jackson	8-1	Needs added mile
7	Tiger	109	Gilbert	8-1	Would surprise
11	Pure Franks	106	Short	15-1	Needs added mile
12	Prince	103	Hanford	15-1	Unable to figure
6	Mood Part	1104	L. Hanford	15-1	Improvement needed
11	Pharaoh	1110	No Boy	15-1	Fourth spot
16	Sasha Plus	1101	H. Fitz	15-1	Facile winner
13	Saturnus	101	O'M	15-1	Rarely speed
12	Bobby Burns	110	No Boy	20-1	Wants cheaper company
4	Boy Scout	1107	Jackson	20-1	Slim chance
21	Threatening	2107	No Boy	20-1	Not here

CANERSINE will be meeting little more than the drubbed last time. She figures to repeat. LIBERTY OAK was the runner up to the top one last time out. He again shapes up as the main danger. LAST TIME is a possibility.

DRESSEN Wants More MONEY

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 15—Remember all that fuss last spring with Don Faurot of Missouri accusing Jack Chevigny of Texas with luring all the Kansas City high school talent to Texas?

Well, out of all those charges and countercharges came one Missouri footballer to Texas—and he's on the second team.

When Cornell scored that touchdown against Columbia, old Gil Dobie was so surprised he fell off the bench. . . Ed Coenrane, Kansas City sports ed, may referee the Louis-Castanaga fight in Havana. . . What Charlie Dressen wants from the Reds is a two-year contract and a fat raise . . . Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Crackers, once sold peanuts in the park. Is now controls . . . After conferring with Joe McCarthy for three hours, Connie Mack blandly said: "No trades were discussed" . . . No?

Coach Caustic

When members of a Detroit high school team, which hadn't won a game, asked their coach for permission to attend a masquerade party, he said: "Sure; go and wear your football uniforms . . . It's the best makeup you could get."

The coach of the Cincinnati Tigers, semi-pro football outfit, has to be careful about telling the boys to go out and fight. . . Walter Neusel once turned down $2500 for an easy fight in a smaller New York club, to go into the Garden for $3.50 . . . That's all he had left after paying Ray Impellitteri a $2,000 campaign.

There will be four of these preliminary meetings on succeeding Monday nights at the St. Botolph Street Sports palace with the grand finals for the Diamond Belt on Monday evening, December 16.

In these weekly gatherings competition will be held in six classes ranging from featherweight to light heavyweight, and the best amateur mitt slingers in the New England district will be seen in action.

Experts Pick Irish to Beat Army

Dartmouth Needs Heavy Guns

By Associated Press

ARMY-NOTRE DAME: Notre Dame is the only possible choice although the Ramblers' series with the Cadets has been marked by hard fighting and astonishing upsets. Anything can happen, but Bill Shakespears and company look too strong for an Army team beaten by Minnesota, Pitt State and Pitt.

DUKE - NORTH CAROLINA: North Carolina's tarheels try to prove a perfect record against a team already beaten by Georgia Tech and Auburn. This is the logical spot for an upset, but the nod goes to North Carolina.

MINNESOTA-MICHIGAN: The Gophers may not be as effective as last year, but they look too good for Michigan.

ARKANSAS - SOUTHERN METHODIST: Southern Methodist's undefeated mustangs should take their second game of the week, but those razorbacks should make it close.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA-WASHINGTON STATE: On the theory that Southern California played well above its par last week, a ballot for Washington State

Pick Ohio State

TEMPLE-MARQUETTE: Marquette beat the team that beat Temple but that uncalculating vote for Pop Warner's Owls can be charged up to a sudden, and possibly embarrassing, hunch.

OHIO STATE-ILLINOIS: The Buckeyes apparently were still playing over that heart-breaker with Notre Dame when they met Chicago last week. This ballot for them expresses the belief they'll send athletic to business to average at least 14 to 13 defeat.

PITTSBURGH-NEBRASKA: Jock Sutherland's Panthers are bad news to all rivals in November. Pitt, but not by much.

BURDUE-IOWA—Until the mystery of Purdue's collapse is explained, Iowa must be the choice.

SYRACUSE-COLGATE—Syracuse, unbeaten and untied, will have to throw the Colgate jinx as well as the Red Raiders themselves. This corner points an uncertain finger at unlucky Colgate.

NAVY-COLUMBIA—Navy.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY-RUTGERS—N. Y. to remain unbeaten and untied.

RICE-TEXAS A. & M.—Rice.

COLORADO-KANSAS—Kansas to "take" the hot-and-apparent to the Rocky Mountain conference throne.

OREGON STATE-IDAHO—Oregon State.

Alphas Open at 'Y'

The Alpha A. C. comes to the Beaver street gym tomorrow night for the first game of the season to try out the new Boston Y. M. H. A. quintet.

Despite the fact that all the familiar veterans of the past five years will be missing, Coach Johnnie Fox will put an aggregation on the floor that will be worthy successors to the stars of former years.

Nate Shrair's Jewels will have the honor of opening the season at 7:45 p. m. facing the Alpha A. C. second team.

NEW Backfield AT B. C.

A new backfield combination, representing the pick of the running, passing, kicking and blocking talent at University Heights, has been assembled by Coach Harry Downes for service in the Springfield game tomorrow, and most likely for the B. U. and Holy Cross tilts which follow.

This new backfield quartet, consisting of three seniors and a junior, has been selected by the Eagle mentor only after much experimentation, and it is confidently expected to give Boston College that punch and drive offensively that has been lacking since the glorious Michigan State triumph.

As a freshman three years ago, he and the other two were the bright stars on a championship eleven, but in their sophomore and junior seasons they never quite lived up to what was expected of them.

BATES Leaves for WORCESTER

By Associated Press

Lewiston, Me., Nov 15 — The Bates college football squad left today for Worcester, Mass., to await the whistle for its last game of the season against Holy Cross tomorrow. After its last home game of the season, the team burned its tackling dummy yesterday.

The squad will stop overnight near Worcester and practice on the Crusaders' field tomorrow morning.

HOGAN PRO

STALKS INTO PRO RANKS

Golden Glove Champion

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

Dick Hogan of Charlestown, who worked carrying bananas from the boats to warehouse on the wharves of Boston, and who fought in the amateurs at night, will turn professional. He will make his bow at the Boston Garden, Nov. 22.

To Fight on Sharkey Card

By Sam Cohen

Sensation of simon-pure ranks for the past two years, the popular young Charlestown heavyweight will make his pro bow in one of the preliminary bouts on the Jack Sharkey-Eddie "Unknown" Winston card at the Boston Garden next Friday evening.

Hogan should be a welcome addition to professional boxing. He has everything it takes to make a heavyweight champion and, with the right kind of schooling, he may reach the heights.

Hogan has joined the boxing stable under the direction of Dan Carroll and Phil Buccolo, capable pilots, who have developed some of the greatest fighters in these parts.

His record as an amateur rivals that of some of the best heavyweights who started out in the unpaid ranks, and they include the present heavyweight sensation, Joe Louis.

Hogan, like most amateur heavyweights, was a knockout puncher in the amateurs, but he is bringing along a brilliant knowledge of boxing science.

Amateur heavyweights of the past had only a punch, and most of them failed to make the professional grade because they lacked ring science.

Hogan can still put on more weight and add strength to any additional poundage he puts on. When he does this, remember this forecast—here is a headliner of the future.

Charlestown has always been a popular fight center, and while Hogan has acquired a large following in the amateurs as a successful professional heavyweight, he would provide that local touch that would bring the game back to the boom days of the Jack Sharkey—Jim Maloney feuds.

Mr. Boston

Quinn Sole Boss

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news:

Bob Quinn will have complete control of the Braves if he comes here as general manager.

The decision as to whether Bill McKechnie will return as manager will be decided by Quinn. Bob has a great admiration for McKechnie's ability as a manager, and is expected to name him to pilot the 1936 Braves.

• • •

It isn't a certainty that all of the Braves' difficulties will be ironed out today. There are still some minority stockholders who are not in line with the 75 per cent who have voted to stand by Adams, Quinn and Major Francis P. Murphy.

• • •

No additional money will be put into the Braves until all of these angles are adjusted. At the most it is merely a matter of time until the new group takes over control of the club.

• • •

Major Murphy is a millionaire shoe manufacturer, and he is anxious to invest sufficient capital in the Braves to give the club a winner.

• • •

Quinn is assured of a warm reception when he returns here. He was very popular when he owned the Red Sox, and carried on in the face of many trying difficulties. When Quinn sold the club to Tom Yawkey, he saw that every person who had invested a dime in the Sox got their money back.

• • •

WINSTON

I UNDERSTAND that Unknown Winston's plan of battle against Jack Sharkey at the Garden on November 22 calls for him to set a terrific clip from the opening gong.

He contends that Sharkey at the age of 33 will slow down if pressed hard. Winston insists he is a better puncher than the former champion.

• • •

Winston secretly resents the fact that Sharkey says he has the Indian sign on all colored heavyweights. Sharkey beated Harry Wills and George Godfrey, and asserts he will lick Joe Louis after he gets through with Winston.

• • •

Winston outscored Ernie Schaaf in a 10-round bout at a time when Sharkey had a half interest in the Wrentham heavyweight. Schaaf stopped Winston in a return bout.

• • •

Winston's best punch is a right hand wallop to the jaw. I do not believe Winston or anybody else ar match left hands with Sharkey. The latter has beaten Tommy Loughran, "Young" Stribling and other famous boxers in a duel of left hands.

• • •

NOTRE DAME

I AM picking Notre Dame to win from the Army in New York tomorrow. The Irish had a natural letdown in their tussle with Northwestern last Saturday. This was due to the hard game they had the previous week with Ohio State.

• • •

Recent reverses suffered by Notre Dame and the Army have not injured the drawing powers of these elevens for this annual classic. The speculators are getting $50 for choice tickets. New Yorkers will always pay tops for any sports attractions they are eager to witness.

• • •

Joe Louis is a 10 to 1 favorite to win over Paulino in their bout in New York on December 13. Louis is expected to break through the defense of the rugged Basque with jarring left jabs and hooks.

• • •

Max Schmeling used a left hand to best Paulino in their 15-round bout in New York. Der Max closed both of Paulino's eyes with his smashing punches. Paulino was a pitiful sight at the end of the fifteenth round.

• • •

Schmeling will sail for the United States the middle of May to get ready for his summer bout with Louis.

• • •

AL McCOY

AL McCOY is training for his ten-round bout with Jack McAvoy in New York on November 29. It is unlikely that McCoy will appear in a Boston ring before next year.

• • •

The favorites have been coming in for their own at Narragansett Park. The long shot players, however, are certain of their innings.

Over a period of years nobody ever got rich playing either favorites or long shots.

The most successful bettors have placed their money on horses paying from 3 to 1 and 6 to 1.

Many of the horses now at Narragansett Park will be shipped to Bay Meadows, California.

WALSH A WOW! IN BOWDOIN BOW

By Walter Kiley

Success in large gobs has come to Adam Walsh at Bowdoin.

Together they have worked out each their own salvations.

The Polar Bears were desperate when they asked Walsh to take over the team that once had proudly held up its head in major competition plumbed the depths a year ago. It failed to win a game on its 1934 schedule.

Walsh, center on the "Seven Mules" line of fond Notre Dame memory, was in a quandary.

He had coached the line at Yale and then shifted to Harvard in a similar capacity. With the advent of Dick Harlow and his imported staff of assistants at Cambridge, there was no room for Walsh.

But once he had decided on succeeding Charlie Bowser at Brunswick, Maine, both Walsh and Bowdoin had solved their problems.

AT TUFTS

Without much new material but with a tremendous amount of improved morale, Walsh set to work with a will.

Today his team is Maine State Conference champion, undefeated except for a single loss to Williams, the outstanding small college team of New England and perhaps the East, the same eleven which held powerful Princeton to a 14-7 surprise score.

It was the Polar Bears who came the nearest to ruining the Jumbos' undefeated record of a year ago. Lew Manly's Tufts team finally pulled out, 7-6, winner. But the Mainers gave the visitors a fright and Manly was first to breathe easily when the placement try for the winning point after went over the crossbar.

Odds would seem to be overwhelmingly against Tufts tomorrow. Yet Manly feels the case is far from hopeless.

Tufts has played Williams, Northeastern and New Hampshire on successive Saturdays. In each case the Jumbos were outweighed and outmanned.

"Bowdoin is more our size than these others," Manly stated today. "Our comparatively light line and small backfield will be better off than when forced to give away valuable pounds."

OLLIE BORDEN

Tufts is gradually improving, pocketing its losses and thinking in the terms of another season.

It goes into tomorrow's game without Charlie Foberg, regular back who injured a shoulder against Boston University; Jack Randall, tackle and guard, best lineman on the team, who was hurt in the Northeastern game; Milcombe Lavargna, running guard, victim of scholarship deficiency; and Ollie Borden, diminutive running back who hurt a knee last Saturday against New Hampshire.

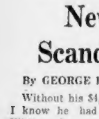
WHITE Proud of His New Scandals

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Without his $4,000,000, and I know he had it, George White takes on a warming aspect that he seemed to lack before the stock market swept away his dollars.

George, himself, has not changed probably in his attitude toward his fellowman. But when he was the cocky little millionaire producer, with ticket speculators salaaming in his presence, with theatergoers begging for his bookings and actors getting up early in the morning to make him as he wended his weary way home, White was one of those Broadway deities that a mere man approached with awe.



George Holland

George is not as rich now as he used to be. When he planned his present "Scandals" there was more to the venture than a laugh and the dispersal of a couple of hundred thousand dollars with the prospect of a triple return. Mr. White is far from impecunious. But much depends on his current show.

I love his present mood.

"Tell them," he said in his bourbonish apartment at the Ritz-Carlton, this morning, "that I think my new show is the greatest of all the 'Scandals.' And THAT, if you will pardon me, is saying something."

* * *

Well, from all reports, the new "Scandals" is not now as good a show as the "Scandals" which introduced "The Birth of the Blues," "This Is My Lucky Day," "The Boy In You, the Girl In Me," and "Thickbottom," Willie and Eugene Howard, Harry Richman, Tom Patricola, Frances Williams, Ann Pennington and Rose Perfect were among the cast of that "Scandals," and the show played more than a year in New York, and 40 or more weeks on the road.

* * *

That was that one. It was strictly a phoney, everything considered, in event that you or I would like to stack it up against the "Scandals" now playing the Boston Opera House.

Mr. White now has Bert Lahr, Cliff Edwards, Sheila Barrett, Grace Barrie, Patsy Jane Cooper, Earl Oxford and a dozen other principals, and the most beautiful "Scandals" chorus ever assembled under his management.

"The show isn't quite right yet," Mr. White informed your correspondent. "But I know exactly what is needed. It has more entertainment in its present state than you can buy any place else in America for the same price."

Your correspondent, who has heard stories about Hollywood and Broadway as they meet in the never-ending transcontinental joust of wits, was interested in a couple of disclosures volunteered by Mr. White.

When your favorite star of the motion pictures seems unusually beautiful in the shadow, the camerama has probably saved his lens with vaseline, or inserted a gauze film between the eye-shutter and the camera-works.

How do I know? Mr. White, a Hollywood producer in his off-time told me so. And that is more than any star, director, technician or cameraman has ever cared to admit for publication.

Gertrude Niesen Headlines Gala Show at Boston

By GEORGE HOLLAND

If George White could fit another girl-singer into the pattern of his new revue, his journey for the perfect discovery need be no longer than the trip from the Boston Opera House to the RKO Boston Theater, where Gertrude Niesen, one of the most entertaining singers in the land, is holding forth this week.

A new Niesen is the one now appearing on the Boston stage. Gone is the trace of sullenness that her personality seemed to hold when she was part of the ill-starred Lew Brown revue, "Calling All Stars," last season. Her ringing voice, clear and fascinating and hypnotic in its powerful trueness, rounds over the theater's amplification system as compellingly as it ever came over a radio. It is helped by the presence of its owner.

Miss Niesen's contralto was the outstanding feature of a grand all-around musical show called most aptly, Melody Mad Revue," in which the vocalist shared honors with Frank and Milt Britton and their bandsmen.

The Britton boys and their assisting musicians are the most abandoned band now active. The breakage of violins and chairs alone would total in dollars the salary of an opening act. In the violence, however, comedy values are carefully considered and it is highly cautious to remark that the Britton organization is the funniest group of musicians touring today.

Miss Niesen gives a marvellous interpretation of "Lullaby of Broadway." She follows this number with another special arrangement of "Be Still, My Heart." A personal coaxing of everything there remains in "La Cucaracha" follows, and the final encore is a Russian ditty about a girl who sells pretzels.

"Melody Mad Revue" has other features of entertainment. The marvellous juggler, Serge Flash, comes back to Boston as one of its members. Six beautiful girls dancing as "The Modern Age Dancers" contribute some deft toe-work. Their routines are symphonic, and their ensemble appearance is no less than beautiful.

* * *

The Boston program lacks nothing in orchestras this week. Two bands, the California Collegians and Joy Hodges' girl orchestra, appear in "To Beat the Band," an entertaining comedy-film with Hugh Herbert and Helen Broderick, Fred Keating and Eric Blore.

Hollywood

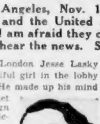
New French Star Studies for Debut on Screen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 15—Can Jesse Lasky, Mary Pickford and the United Artists' organization keep a secret? I am afraid they can, but on the other hand we snoopers hear the news. So I am going to spill the dirt.

White in London Jesse Lasky saw a beautiful girl in the lobby of a hotel. He made up his mind that he'd meet her and sign her for pictures.

Fate was with him that day and he was introduced to the young lady whose name is Arlenne Borg. She could speak only five words in English. A test was made of her and she looked astonishingly like Louella O. Parsons Marlene Dietrich, and registered like a million.



So Miss Borg, who is a French girl, is now here in Hollywood, if you please, studying every day. You can see why United Artists would keep her presence a secret, for after all the money they spent exploiting Anna Sten they wouldn't want to have another similar experience.

* * *

Dolores Del Rio should do for the brunettes in technicolor what Miriam Hopkins did for the blondes. At any rate, Jack Whitney, who made the first feature color film with Miriam in "Becky Sharp," has now signed Dolores for a color picture and he is looking for just the right story.

Curiously enough, Dolores made the very first color test for Whitney several years ago, but at that time she was under contract to Warners and nothing could be done about it.

* * *

The singing of Negro spirituals in "Green Pastures" is tremendously important as you know if you have seen the play. Therefore, the powers that be at Warner Brothers studio, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis went on a still hunt for Hal Johnson and his Negro choir, considered one of the best spiritual singing choruses in the world.

They were in the original company of "Green Pastures" in New York and they have just been on a concert tour.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood

IVAN SMITH flying to New York to be present at ESTELLE TAYLOR'S debut as a night club entertainer; this romance, by whispers, is hotter than pepper at the moment; CARY GRANT, now in London, completely engrossed in his new wife, VIRGINIA CHERRILL; RANDY SCOTT, his pal, didn't hear a word from him for three weeks; BUDDY ROGERS telephoning friends in Hollywood that his engagement to MARY BRIAN is only gossip; CLAUDETTE COLBERT really one of the loveli st looking women in our town; MARY CARLISLE who still thinks that JAMES BLAKELEY is a little bit of all right, applauding him at the Pasadena community playhouse. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Typical Rogers Film

By ANN AMES

Will Rogers is appearing in his last picture "In Old Kentucky" at the Paramount and Fenway theaters this week. The millions of Rogers' fans will not be disappointed in this, his last opus. It is typical "Rogerian" entertainment.

* * *

We have the same homily wit so characteristic of the, la'e comedian. He employs the same shrewd common sense which serves to solve all difficulties. And there are plenty of difficulties in this picture.

* * *

The plot, which isn't a particularly original one, concerns two rival horse trainers. The disadvantages naturally lie with the one who has the heroine (Dorothy Wilson) as his graddaughter.

Rogers, at the beginning of the film, is the head trainer for the rival camp. But when his sentiments betray him as being in sympathy with Miss Wilson and her grandfather, who is suffering from the disadvantages of second childhood, he is promptly fired.

He just as promptly goes over to the Wilson and Sellon household ("Grampie" is played by Charles Sellon), and prepares "Greyboy," the one habitat of the stable, for the big race.

The difficulties which beset our hero, Greyboy, and Miss Wilson, are too numerous to enumerate and the ruse used to win the race for Greyboy, too clever to disclose.

* * *

But aside from the plot which is very secondary, when Mr. Rogers plays in a film, let us mention the novelties of the fare.

We have Will Rogers tap dancing. He has for his coach, none other than Bill Robinson, who does very well for himself throughout the picture.

"Mimi" is the familiar story of "La Vie de Boheme." And the story needs no retelling here. The acting is adequate.

Richard Dix Scores

Thrills on Memorial Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

Based on the years to come, "Transatlantic Tunnel," with its thrills and stars, captured the audience at its first showing at the Keith Memorial Theater.

Richard Dix has another of his he-man hero roles—this time he is an engineer who loses the love of his wife and sacrifices the life of his son in the construction of a gigantic transatlantic tunnel.

The wizardry of the photoplay technicians has made the undersea scenes breathlessly exciting and furnishes a spectacular background for the up and down fortunes of an idealistic engineer.

Richard Dix

Added to the picture's unusual plot is the opportunity of seeing two great actors, Walter Huston and George Arliss, in bit roles, although we must confess that George Arliss as prime minister of England is still George Arliss.

Dix gets better than able support from Leslie Banks, Madge Evans, Helen Vinson and C. Aubrey Smith who keep this production from going the way of most futuristic pictures.

McAllen, a famous tunnel engineer, convinces a group of hard-boiled millionaires—they are still in existence then—that a transatlantic tunnel would add immensely to their wealth.

An undersea disaster, which claims the lives of hundreds, including McAllen's son, brings fury of the mob and tunnel stockholders upon the shoulders of the engineer.

Maine and New Hampshire—Cloudy, probably occasional light rain or snow tonight and light snow or rain in south portion tonight and Saturday; slightly colder in the interior.

Vermont—Cloudy and slightly colder today and Saturday, probably light snow in south and rain or snow in north portion.

Atlantic Coast, Eastport to Sandy Hook —Fresh north shifting to northeast or east winds and overcast weather, probably occasional light rain tonight and Saturday.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

There has not been much change in temperature in the mid-continental area of anticyclonic air that extends from New England, the middle and upper Mississippi Valley eastward to the south Atlantic and Gulf coasts. The great mass of cold air from the northwestern interior that was moving southward from Canada has been largely spent over the upper Great Lakes region and the western Plains, lowering the temperature 9 to 33 degrees. Rain or snow has fallen in over southern Ontario, Nova Lookout, 30.00 inches, and Moosonee, 29.98 degrees, and over southern Manitoba and southern Ontario temperatures are 2 to 16 degrees lower. A disturbance from the Pacific is approaching the Washington and Oregon coasts, Seattle, 30.73 inches, where rain is falling. This depression has induced a current of warm air from the south to move northward over the interior Plains and southern portions of British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, causing temperatures 6 to 28 degrees. Rain is falling over many areas along a front from Texas northeastward to northern New York where a change to snow occurs. Elsewhere over central and northern New England, rain is falling at several stations on the south Atlantic coast, and snow is falling at several stations in the Lake region. The freezing isotherm extends from Alberta southward to Utah and eastward to Oregon, then northeastward to Wisconsin, and eastward to central New England to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The temperature at Mayo Is Valley, Yukon, is 50 degrees below zero.

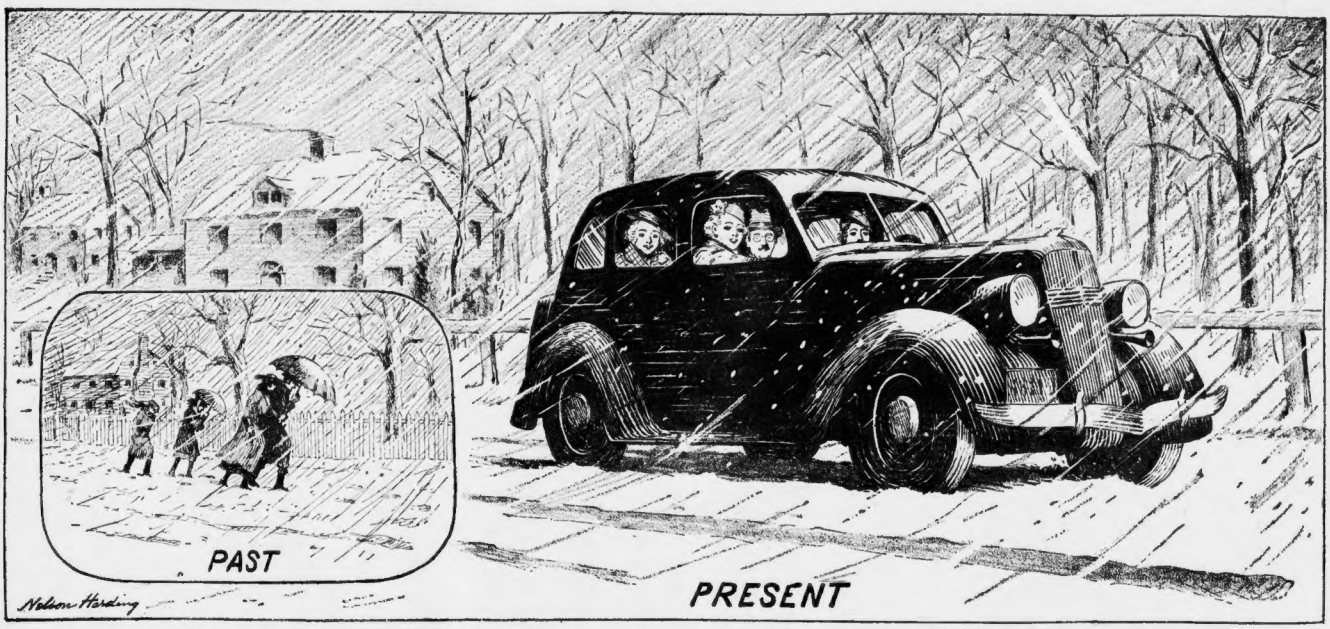
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

The Winter Automobile—A Sun Parlor on Wheels



THE AUTOMOBILE WEARS THE WINTER RUBBERS, ON ITS WHEELS, FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY.

Mr. Harding's admirable cartoon tells plainly its story of progress, increased comfort and happiness. And you will see that story illustrated and demonstrated by the wonderful 1936 automobiles on display tomorrow at the Mechanics Building in Huntington avenue.

* * *

More than 4,250,000 new cars will be built in the coming year—there could be no better news than that for all Americans.

The new automobiles will bring happiness to more than 4,000,000 families. And this season of approaching Winter, as Mr. Harding's cartoon shows, is the season above all others when an automobile is an absolute NECESSITY.

* * *

All but very young people will grasp instantly the meaning of Mr. Harding's picture; they remember days when for old people it was "stay indoors or risk pneumonia, until Spring weather comes again."

Those who live in the country remember the old way of going to church on Sunday, or to the nearby moving picture theater on week days.

If the distance justified the effort, the horse and carriage, if any, were brought 'round. But for the average family it meant rubbers, mufflers, heavy coats, "bundling up," walking through snow, slush, and leaving the "old folks" at home.

* * *

Now, with more than twenty million automobiles running in the United States, and more than four millions of new cars to be added this year, the picture is changed, as Mr. Harding shows you.

Instead of young members of the family putting on rubbers and leaving the old people at home, the automobile wears the rubbers for all.

There is no harnessing of horses, no walking, no fighting the bitter Winter winds or snow or hail or rain.

The car comes 'round, the whole family gets into the generously roomy Winter "sun parlor on wheels," warmed to suit by the car's exhaust, thoroughly ventilated, without the dangerous draughts, dreaded by the old. There is room for all, and the whole family, UNITED, goes where it will.

All Americans will want to see the new 1936 models and should see them. The wise American will buy one of the 4,250,000 automobiles to be added this year to the nation's supply of cars.

See the big automobile exhibition, examine the cars, make your children understand the mechanism; most of them can understand it after twelve years of age. Americans should understand and impress on children how much every family owes in comfort, luxury, health, convenience and time saving to the skill of American engineers, the conscientious work of American mechanics, and the courage and unceasing enterprise of American business men, whose energy and ambition have put this nation ahead of all others in the automobile industry.

This is the season to get rid of the old car; it can be traded in, advantageously. And automobile companies, arranging the financing on fair, convenient terms, make the purchase of a new car simple and easy.

* * *

Go to the big automobile show, see what has been done since you last looked over the new models. SEE THE CARS OF 1936.

If you think that you do not need or cannot afford a new car, see the new cars nevertheless. One of them will persuade you that you are mistaken and that you DO need a new car.

* * *

Four million two hundred and fifty thousand new automobiles to be made this year will mean happiness for four million families, work and wages for thousands of men.

News of prosperity in the automobile industry in which the United States rules the world, IS GOOD NEWS for the whole country.

Honor Your Flag

Miss Cora M. Foster, 45 years a Lynn school teacher, has again refused to salute the American flag.

With threat of dismissal hanging over her, she steadfastly declines to raise her hand to the Stars and Stripes.

Rather, it is a simple, very American expression of gratitude to the country which has protected us in peace and defended us in war.

Wherever our eyes may turn we cannot fail to see some manifestation of the nation's contribution to our material welfare.

"Old Glory" is symbolic of America's unity and of man's victory over chaos. For that we love it.

A half-century on the public payroll, Miss Foster persists in enacting the lone role of "pioneer woman without a flag."

Mothers vs. Raw Deal

The "Minute Women of 1936" are on the march.

From the far corners of New England they come, answering the call of Mrs. J. Harper Blaisdell of Winthrop, who rose from a sick bed to lead the war on Raw Deal extravagance.

Movements sponsored by mothers have a persistent habit of succeeding. This will be no exception.

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 15—Thoughts while strolling: Wonder if the antinoise campaign will affect Cab Calloway? Helen Rowland spots married couples the way they lean on restaurant tables. Be fun to go through Ovington's carrying a cane with a crook. You know, rake things off tables with a swish.

Long-ago look-alikes: Frank Munsey and James Gordon Bennett. Whatever became of contortionists? Keep an eye on that young Buddy Ebsen in the films. He's going places.

When Rudy Vallee sings "Rudy" it looks like a Chinese letter. Achmed Abdullah, without his monocle, the uneouth person. Add industrious red-heads: Ann Grosvenor Ayres and Irene Hayes. H. N. Swanson, who thought up College Humor and was a schoolmate of Gary Cooper, has become a literary agent, too.

How many remember the first revolving door at the old Waldorf? Whoops! Dandy name for play: Kenyon Nicholson's "Swing the Lady!" Shivering Palm Beach window displays. Brrr! Dean of the ticket specs—Leo Newman. Only a few of the specs left. Only a few of anything left for all that.

Among the perpetual pegs upon which the larger crop of stories, some good but mostly so so, are hung are Sam Goldwyn, Dorothy Parker, George S. Kaufman and Irvin Cobb.

To Goldwyn is accredited the major dialectic blunders, chiefly manufactured by Hollywood gag men. Every risque tale that will send Aunt Het flying from the room is affixed to Miss Parker. And the acidy, stinging threats are bugled as Kaufman's. Not more than five per cent are correctly tagged.

But to sponsor a tale so somehow gives it better introduction. To say that Miss Parker authored this or that is more likely to get a listener. And so on.

I have crossed the continent on trains with Sam Goldwyn on occasion or so and talked to him frequently. He has an accent he has never quite shaken off and slightly Weberfieldsian, but I have yet to hear him express himself in the awkwardly ridiculous fashion so widely tittered.

Indeed, he has a shrewd, trigger mind as his successful record proves. Crazy like the fox!

When a church in Lincoln, Neb., burned a number of years ago it destroyed a batch of drawings collectors would prize today. Virtually every hymn book in the edifice was fly-leafed with the early art creations of the cartoonist, Clare Briggs. His formative days, before going to Chicago, were spent there.

During services Briggs furtively sketched the parade—the new pastor, the bald choir leader, the Misses White's new milliner, the sanctimonious deacon, the plate passers and such. At the time they caused censure-for-sacrilege rebukes but somehow were never erased, and today would be treasured.

I remember Charles T. Hoge, Portland, Ore., editor, who chummed with Briggs during that callow period, telling of his return to Lincoln after his Chicago invasion. It had something of the pomp of Napoleon's arrival from Elba. New bridge work, cigars in two top vest pockets and wired doo-hickey that kept his coat lapels just so.

He attended his old Sunday school and no one paid attention to the stirring story of Joshua and the solar stasis. Their eyes were glued to Briggs' silk ribboned watch-fob with initials in cut-out gold.

Louis Sobol, who annotates Broadway antics for the Evening Journal, dedicated a recent column to a water wagon pledge. He discovered in zig-zaging the nightly trail, a drink here, another there and perhaps a chilled pint to commemorate the opening of a new Tony's, he was rolling in at dawn now and then comfortably mellow.

* * *

A visitor today was O. O. Oolon, who is one up on the late Otto Floto for the letter o sweepstakes. He is a New Zealander and I told him the oft repeated tale of the many o'd producer, A. A. Aarons.

Aarons, asked to spell his name answering a phone call began.

"A. A. A-a."

"Smart guy, eh!"

Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Great Lover knows women from the emotional standpoint. The psychologist knows them theoretically. And the lawyer has a pretty good line on them.

But the man who knows them best—and never boasts about it—is the medico. The good old family doctor!

The ideal physician is one who can listen more devoutly than a lover, look more concerned than a mother and exercise more diplomacy than a foreign ambassador.

If a doctor will only listen until a woman has gotten her last symptom out of her system, he has her half cured, and can safely advise her to get up and go out to a bridge party, or to Hot Springs or the races.

After a few years spent among pink boudoirs, hysteria, tears, disinfectants, nerves, smelling salts and hypochondriacs, NO woman can fool him, ruffle him or take him for a ride.

A really good doctor soon learns that a woman simply MUST emote, now and then, or something will happen. So he permits her to emote for his benefit—at so much per emote. Or so much per gasp.

And, unlike a husband, he is wise enough to look very grave and pretend to take her seriously, instead of rushing out and slamming the door behind him. No doctor ever banged out and slammed the door, with a muttered "damn," just because a woman started screaming.

A doctor knows how to soothe a woman and make her feel ashamed of herself or pleased with herself, as the case may demand. He can see right through her heartburn or her headaches to her vanity or her martyr complex.

Trouble in the East

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

"We are forced to the conclusion that Chiang Kai-shek must relinquish his post," says Col. Takashi Sakai, chief of staff of the Japanese forces in North China. "A new setup, politically as well as economically independent of Nanking, is necessary in North China," says Major Gen. Hayao Tada, commandant of the Japanese forces in Tientsin.

Edwin C. Hill

In view of such statements, there can be no doubt that Mr. Chiang Kai-shek, the forty-nine-year-old dictator, is on the spot. Things already have begun to pop. The prime minister of Nanking government has been shot by an assassin, presumably because the prime minister was pro-Japanese.

A DEVIL'S BROTH

China has gone off the silver standard and has nationalized its currency, much to the annoyance of Tokio. And England is rushing to explain that she is not behind the monetary policy inaugurated at Nanking.

A devil's broth is brewing in the East. The West is pretty much occupied with Mussolini, Ethiopia and the Mediterranean and it appears that Japan is ready to take advantage of this preoccupation and do in Northern China, at least, what she has already done in Manchuria.

The wily Chiang and the equally wily Japanese foreign office have been playing a diplomatic game for the past year without either getting anywhere in particular. Now we are about to have the showdown.

Foreign Minister Hirota's policy has been one of conciliation, hoping by negotiation with Nanking to have the Chinese recognize the independence of Manchukuo and to end the boycott against Japanese goods.

Chiang, on the other hand, has been trying to extend his control over North China against the opposition of the provincial warlords and the guerilla Communist armies. At the same time he has been careful not to openly oppose the Japanese.

They mistrust him, see him playing for time, years if necessary, until he is ready to oppose Japan. They are certain, too, that he has made another about-face and is dealing with Moscow. This is borne out by the statement in Nanking that:

"China has not yet been forced to decide between Russia and Japan, but some time in the future, perhaps, China must make this momentous decision."

He's shrewd and far-seeing, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek. He knows the airplane can do for China in the next 20 years what it would take five centuries of railroad building to do.

He sees it as the commercial unifier of the country and as the major defensive weapon in war.

Will he have time to use it?
